FIGHTING HAS BEEN RENEWED

But Defiant Challenge of Turks May Not End Peace Move.

TERMS LIKELY TO BE MODIFIED

Bulgarians Resume Assault on Ottoman Lines at Tchatalja.

London, Nov. 22.—"Come and take them," the defiant reply of the Turks to the demand made by the allied Balkan nations for the evacuation of the line of fortifications at Tchatalja in front of Constantinople, is not believed in diplomatic circles necessarily to mean the end of the negotiations for an armistice, though fighting has been resumed.

From Sofia comes word today that the victorious invaders are likely to modify their conditions. The European powers at the same time are exerting themselves to induce the nations composing the Balkan league to bring their terms more into line with the facts of the situation and to arrange a treaty which will give them all they have conquered, but will leave out that which has not been conquered.

Compared with its earlier disastrous experiences the Turkish army evidently now considers itself in favorable position. Military experts here see in the failure of the projected Bulgarian rush into Constantinople signs of a reaction among the invaders after their sustained efforts of the past month.

Allies Have No More to Gain.

In view of the fact that the Ottoman capital even if captured must ultimately be evacuated, in accordance with the decree of the great powers, it appears that the allies have nothing to gain by insisting on the surrender of the lines which form virtually the gate of the city. Hence the hope expressed by diplomats that this demand be withdrawn, in which case it is thought Turkey, recognizing that she has no prospect of taking the offensive for the recovery of her lost territory, would quickly conclude that she has nothing to gain by continuing the conflict. She would perhaps agree to enter into negotiations on the basis of a surrender of all but a reasonable strip of territory at the back of Constantinople, the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus.

Has Not Barred Door.

The announcement from Sofia this afternoon of the appointment of Bulgarian plenipotentiaries to discuss the terms of an armistice with the Turkish envoys tends to confirm the contention of diplomats that the Ottoman rejection of the first terms proposed by Bulgaria has not barred the door to further negotiations. Even the Ottoman embassy here agrees that if the "exorbitant" demands for the evacuation of the famous Tchatalja line of fortifications is dropped the principal obstacle to the discussion of terms will be removed.

TO BE OFFERED IN BIG VARIETY

Many Public Utilities Commission Bills Are Coming.

COVER WIDE RANGE

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 22.—Bills for a public utilities commission will be introduced in the legislature by several members. The outlook is that they will be of a great variety. Senator James J. Netterville, of Anderson, and Dale J. Crittenberger, also of Anderson, but not a senator, are said to be collaborating on a public utilities bill. Crittenberger is in close touch with the traction interecests which have headquarters at Anderson. He was secretary of the senate two years ago.

Senator B. B. Shively, of Marion, has prepared a bill for a public utilities commision. Senator Will Carleton, of Evansville, also is said to have a bill on the same subject. Representative John J. Keegan, of this city, will have a bill.

A meeting has been held of the heads of several public servic ecorporations in Indianapolis to discuss the provisions of a public utilities commission bill which would be satisfactory to corporations.

TWO NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH

Speeding Car Plunges Over 35-Foot Embankment at Lafayette.

AUTO ACCIDENT IS SPECTACULAR

Newlyweds at Warren Try Original Prank; Are Arrested.

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 22.—Two men were injured and had narrow escapes from death in a spectacular automobile accident early today on a steep embankment a mile south of the city. John Metzger, of this city, and C. R. Griffin, of Frankfort, were returning from a night rabbit hunt. With them in the car were Larry Berry, of Frankfort, and John Simpson, of this city. As the car was running south on Elston hill and crossing a railroad it failed to make the sharp curve and plunged down a thirty-five foot embankment after crashing through board fences.

Metzger was pinned to the ground by the heavy machine and Griffin was rendered unconscious when he struck a tree.

With the assistance of two other automobilists in a machine following the car was lifted from Metzger and he was brought to the hospital. His left arm was broken and he was hurt internally. Griffin was badly cut and bruised about the head.

NEWLYWEDS GO TO JAIL.

Constable at Warren Fails to Recognize Original Prank.

Huntington, Ind., Nov. 22.—To evade the pranks of their friends Mr. and Mrs. Frank Christy, of Warren on their return from their wedding trip, slipped from their home soon after arrival in town, dressed in tattered attire and went into the streets as charity seekers. The town marshal arrested them and the newlyweds spent an hour in jail before they could convince the constable of their identity. Mr. Christy is a young merchant of Warren.

GOT WRONG LICENSE.

Rush at Clerk's Office in Terre Haute Tangles Wedding Plans.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 22.—Eugene Henry went to the county clerk's office to obtain a marriage license intending to marry Mrs. Mae Robinson. A rush was on and the clerk examined him for a hunter's license. Henry, dazed, answered the questions and took the license. On recovering from his surprise he returned and explained that he desired a marriage license. The clerk could not issue it because the costs in Mrs. Robinson's recent divorce case had not been paid.

ECONOMY HOTEL BURNS.

Guests All Escape Flames in Wayne County Town.

Richmond, Ind., Nov. 22.—Fire early today destroyed the Central hotel in Economy, Wayne county. All guests in the house escaped. The dry goods store of M. A. Wilson, adjoining the hotel, burned. The loss was about $7,000, partly covered by insurance. Economy has no fire protection and other property was saved by a bucket brigade.

COLLEGE MAN ON PERJURY CHARGE

Prof. L. D. Hall, University of Illinois, Placed Under Arrest.

RESULT OF ELECTION

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 22.—Prof. L. D. Hall, of the faculty of the University of Illinois, was arrested here today on an indictment charging perjury in connection with an inquiry into voting by students of the institution at the late election.

Two students also were arrested on indictments charging illegal voting. They are James Noon, of Everett, Mass., a resident at the Y. M. C. A. building, and Walter J. Blum, of Chicago. Blum is a member of the junior class.

About twenty more indictments are to be heard from and the university community is in a state of great excitement. Prof. Hall, who is assistant professor of animal husbandry in the college of agriculture, was a leader in the battle against saloons in Champaign at the last local option election and made affidavit that a number of university students were legal voters. Since that time County Judge Spurgin has ruled that many students had no right to vote. The Champaign county grand jury was called to consider the question of illegal voting and Prof. Hall's indictment followed. A bitter legal battle is to result. The civic league of the city today raised a fund of $1,000 to defend him and all others indicted.

Prof. Hall was released on $1,000 bond. He will be tried at the January term of court.

Stronghold of Scot-Tishrite Falls Before Fezzed Forces

(Special to The Sentinel.)

Cam-El-Back, Hotsands, Nov. 22.—The walled stronghold of Scot-Tishrite capitulated today before a horde of followers of the Prophet, who, after a terrific bombardment of applications and pastdues, took complete control of the seemingly invincible Christian fortress. The garrison of Fort Wa-Yne, although apprised of the impending invasion, failed to repel the attack, and many women and children sought refuge in the Temple Stoud-Er, in the neighboring hamlet of Vaudeville. A large number of refugees from the near-by provinces of St. Eub-En, L'Agran-Ge, Whi-Tley, Nob-le, Ad-Ams, W-Ells, Dek-Al-B, El-Khart, Re-Sciuak-O and Hun-Tirgt-On, were captured by the invaders and compelled to join in the onslaught. The authorities are apprehensive of further depredations tonight when, it is feared, a large number of captives are to be led out into the desert, to become the victims of relentless slaughter (with the S left off.)

LIVELY BATTLE IS IN PROSPECT

Over Effort to Keep Woman's Suffrage Organization Non-Partisan.

NEED A LARGER HALL

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—Expressing satisfaction over the enthusiasm displayed by the great crowds in attendance upon the first day's session, delegates to the fourty-fourth annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage convention were early astir arranging details for their second day's work.

The national president, Anna Shaw, announced prior to a meeting of the executive board at 9:30 o'clock that efforts were being made to secure a hall of sufficient size to accommodate all who wished to attend the sessions. After the executive meeting a general business session was held at which reports of committees were read and adopted and recommendations from the executive board were received. A second business session will be held this afternoon and tonight's meeting will be given over exclusively to men.

Finances were the principal topic of discussion at the morning session. It was shown by the report of the ways and means committee, of which Miss M. Carey Thomas is the chairman, that a deficit of $4,779 exists in the national treasury which deficit is due principally to the official organ, "The Woman's Journal," the contract for which was discontinued in October.

A proposed amendment to the constitution provides that "the officers and members of the National American Woman's Suffrage association maintain a strictly non-partisan attitude to all political parties, excepting, however, members of the association from states, where equal suffrage is in force."

This amendment was adversely reported to the convention by the executive board and is expected to cause a stiff fight among the delegates. It is said this amendment was inspired by the action of Miss Jane Addams, vice president of the national association, who took an active part in the recent presidential campaign in behalf of the progressive party.

RICH HAUL IN JEWELRY.

Burglars Hurl Horseshoe Through Chicago Store Window.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Burglars hurled a horseshoe wrapped in a newspaper through the window of Beig & Co., jewelers, on Michigan boulevard, today and escaped with jewelry valued at $2,500. It is the fourth time the establishment has been robbed in a similar manner.

CHILD AT PLAY WITH DYNAMITE

McManigal Recounts Use of Explosive as a Toy by Daughter.

IT AMUSED M'NAMARA

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 22.—Ortie E. McManigal's story of finding his little girl in the kitchen of his home in Chicago playing with 81 pound sticks of dynamite which he had left on a radiator to thaw, was told by him at the dynamite conspiracy trial today.

The dynamiter testified he and James B. McNamara had gone to Chicago to blow up non-union work in South Chicago in February, 1911, having arranged with R. H. Houlihan, secretary of a local iron workers' union, but when they reached Chicago from Indianapolis they found the dynamite frozen.

At James B.'s suggestion he put the dynamite on a radiator and went to look over the proposed job. When he returned, he said, his little daughter was on the floor with the dynamite and James B., the Los Angeles Times dynamiter, was testing a battery on the door bell.

"J. B. laughed when he saw my little girl toying with the explosive," said McManigal. "He said, 'tell papa what that is.' My little girl replied, 'why, it is dynamite. I know it won't hurt me,' and kept on playing. She said she had seen some boys kicking about some sticks that looked like dynamite. The way J. B. laughed made me mad and I ordered him out of the house."

McManigal said when he and James B. went to South Chicago they found the glare of nearby furnaces so brilliant they did not do as much damage as they intended, placing only two bombs instead of four.

Stealing twelve hundred pounds of dynamite, hiding it in a shed at Tiffin, Ohio, and then, in suit cases, transporting it on passenger trains to Indianapolis, was an experience also related by McManigal today.

WOMAN GOLF EXPERT DIES.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Mrs. Bernard C. Horne, known to golfing enthusiasts as Bessie Anthony, for years woman western golf champion, died early today at her home, "Glenview," near Keswick, Va.

In many of her championship matches Bessie Anthony had "Chick" Evans for her caddy.

DIES OF BLOOD POISONING.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 22.—Alfred Lindler, of Buffalo, a freshman student at the University of Michigan, died today from blood poisoning that resulted from a bruise on one of his heels sustained by stepping on a stone during a cross country run in October.

ALIENISTS CALL SCHRANK INSANE

Crank Who Shoe Roosevelt Listens Intently to Lengthy Report.

WILL GO TO ASYLUM

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 22.—The commission of alienists investigating as to the mental condition of John Schrank, who shot Col. Roosevelt today reported unanimously that he was insane. The conclusions reached by the commission are as follows:

"First, John Schrank is suffering from insane delusions, grandiose in character and of a systematized variety.

"Second, in our opinion he is insane at the present time.

"Third, on account of the connection existing between his delusions and the act with which he stands charged we are of the opinion he is unable to confer intelligently with counsel on the conduct of his defense.

"Richard Dewey, M. D., Chairman.
"W. F. Becker, M. D.
"D. W. Harrington, M. D.
"Frank Studley, M. D.
"William F. Wegge, M. D.
"Commissioners."

Schrank was conducted from the county jail to the city hall by a strong guard but without being handcuffed. The prisoner was pale, although he appeared not to be excited. He listened intently to the report of the alienists, which was read by the chairman, Dr. Richard Dewey.

The commissioner's report consists of several thousand words and starts out with setting forth the personal and family history of the defendant. Many portions of the report bear upon the present physical state of the prisoner, neurological data and winds up with many exhibits containing numerous written communications of the defendant. The report also contains a lengthy statement made to Chief of Police Janssen on the day following Schrank's arrest.

CHILD RUN DOWN BY AUTO.

Genevieve Strieder Seriously Bruised by Auto Driver.

Genevieve Strieder, nine years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul T. Strieder, 921 Crescent avenue, was run down and seriously bruised today at Jefferson and Clinton streets, as she was leaving school at noon.

The occupants of a big touring car that struck the child, picked her up and took her home, had a physician called and remained until they saw that the girl was not dangerously hurt. In the excitement Mr. Strieder neglected to get the names of the owners of the car.

NOW ANOTHER ONE GETS OUT

Resignation of Assistant U. S. Treasurer Bantz is Requested.

OUT OF SYMPATHY WITH MR. MACVEAGH

Secretary Proposes Wholesale Reorganization of the Office.

Washington, Nov. 22.—Secretary MacVeagh today asked for the resignation of Gideon C. Bantz, as assistant treasurer of the United States because he is said not to be in sympathy with the administration policy of the secretary of the treasury. Mr. Bantz will be succeeded by Christian S. Pearce, at present chief of the division of banks, loans and postal savings.

The resignation of Mr. Bantz following so closely that of Treasurer Lee McClung, is admittedly part of a plan of reorganization of the treasurer's office by Secretary MacVeagh. The secretary today declared he intended to leave the treasurer's office in an "up to date, progressive" condition for the incoming democratic administration. No further changes are contemplated, it is stated, the resignation of Mr. Bantz and the filling of existing vacancies completing the program.

Mr. Bantz will be offered a place as chief of a division in the treasury department. Secretary MacVeagh stated today that he had instituted methods for the improvement of the office of treasurer. "I intend placing men in charge," said the secretary, "who are in sympathy with my policy, so that there will be no liklihood of a reaction to the old methods when I leave office, compelling my successor as secretary of the treasury to spend his term of office going over the ground I have covered."

Taft Works on Message.

President Taft cancelled business and cabinet engagements today to work upon his message to congress, but found time for several social engagements during the afternoon and evening. At noon the president attended the wedding of Miss Eleanor Cullom Ridgeley, granddaughter of Senator Shelby M. Cullom, of Illinois, to Dr. Henry P. Barker.

The president's afternoon engagements included attendance at a special cavalry drill at Fort Myer for the army relief fund and a trip to Baltimore to attend an opera performance tonight.

WILSON THREATENS TO THRASH PHOTOGRAPHER.

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 22.—President-elect Woodrow Wilson today had a lively dispute with an American photographer which almost led to the exchange of blows. The photographer took a snap shot at Mr. Wilson in spite of his prohibition. Mr. Wilson angrily exclaimed, "You are no gentleman. If you want a good thrashing, keep that up. I can take care of myself in these things. I came here especially to avoid photographers."

Mr. Wilson passed the greater part of today in making bicycling excursions in the vicinity of his residence.

RIVER YIELDS BODY OF GIRL

Daughter of Former Governor of Rhode Island Probable Suicide.

MISS GARVIN HAD ACTED STRANGELY

Disappeared on Wednesday Evening After Starting for Lecture.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 22.—The body of Miss Nora Garvin, daughter of former Gov. L. F. C. Garvin, were found in the river today. Miss Garvin disappeared Wednesday evening.

The body was in deep water, not far from the shore. Members of Miss Garvin's family said that she had been unusually reticent during the past few weeks and had taken many evening walks. She had complained of trouble with her head and had expressed a fear that she would meet death in the water. A note found after she left home read: "I can't get the water off my mind." This led to the dragging of the river which is near the Garvin home in Lonsdale. Miss Garvin was 36 years old.

Mrs. Maude Howell Elliott lectured at Browns university Wednesday evening on woman suffrage. Miss Garvin had planned to attend the lecture and take Mrs. Elliott with her to the Garvin home in Providence. Members of the family were not alarmed when Miss Garvin failed to return, supposing she had remained in Providence, and it was not until Thursday that any alarm was felt.

Upon investigation it was found that Miss Garvin had not reached the railroad station, five minutes walk from her home, where she planned to take a train for Providence. A hat which Miss Garvin wore when she left home was found yesterday on the shore at Mill pond, between the Garvin home and the station but the body was not in the pond. Last night the dragging of the river that feeds the pond was begun and the body was found this morning.

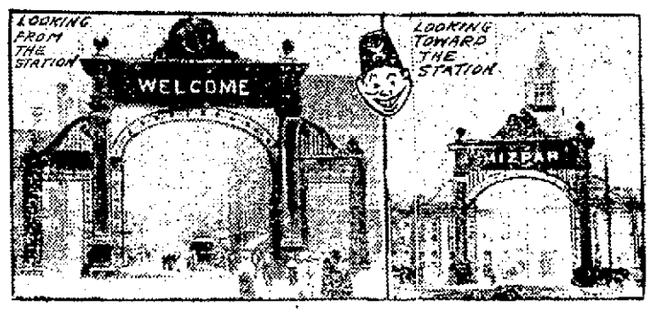
M'KINLEY'S FAVORITE RIDING HORSE KILLED.

New Philadelphia, Ohio, Nov. 22.—Charger, former President McKinley's riding horse, met a violent death today on the farm of Albert Lewis, at Strasburg. He became entangled in a wire fence and strangled.

Charger was President McKinley's favorite mount. After his master's death the horse was sent to the Lewis farm. Although 27 years old he would prance to music.

Mizpah Patrol in Denver



The Denver Arch Which Gladdened the Hearts of the Fort Wayne Shrine Patrol

TODAY'S gathering of the nobles of the Mystic Shrine has, in a measure, assumed the form of a reunion of the members of Mizpah patrol and others who made the eventful trip to Los Angeles last May. The reunion has brought out many interesting reminiscences, one of which is related by Brown Cooper concerning a visit of the patrol to Denver on the return trip.

"We had had a splendid time in Salt Lake City," said Brown, "and they certainly did make things pleasant for us. We did not expect much of a reception at Denver, however, and you can imagine our surprise and delight when we stepped from the train at about 9 o'clock in the evening to find a large arch erected at the head of the street, with the word 'Welcome' blazing forth in electric lights. We formed in order and marched beneath the arch toward the hotel where we were to stop, and just as we had passed underneath it a loud cheer went up. I didn't know what it was all about until I looked back and saw that the Denver people had placed the word 'Mizpah' on the reverse side of the arch. Of course, we stopped right there and the band gave a serenade while the boys, anxious to show their appreciation and at the same time to stretch their travel-weary legs, did a few fancy drill stunts under Capt. Kilbourne's commands. We all voted that Denver was all right.

"Well, we had a pleasant evening and retired happy and ready for rest. The next morning I got out early with camera and went down to take a shot of the arch. I had the thing focused and ready to shoot when I saw something that seemed wonderfully strange. Cosily stowed away in the recesses of the letter P in Mizpah was a last year's birds' nest.

"Yes, the arch and the wording are permanent. They were there for years before we struck town and will doubtless be there for the next generation or two. Mizpah, you know, means 'The Lord watch between thee and me, while we are absent one from the other.' It is Denver's parting word to all who pass through the arch to take an outbound train.

"Oh, no! The boys didn't feel cheap when they found it out."

FOUND STRANGER SITTING ON BED

Three Women Have Exciting Experience With an Intruder.

STRUCK ONE OF THEM

All efforts on the part of the police to apprehend a man who entered the home of Claude C. Miller, 2002 Pauline street, about 2 o'clock this morning and frightened Mrs. Miller, Miss Ollie Breham and Miss Lola Baker have proven fruitless.

The fellow is probably a degenerate and is believed by the police to be the same who entered the Collis home earlier in the week and scared two women badly. Entrance to the Miller home was gained by means of a pantry window.

When the man was discovered he was sitting on the bed occupied by Mrs. Miller and when she woke up he struck her and bruised her badly. The three women were aroused by the noise and all attacked him but he managed to get down stairs and escape and ran across the Taylor street bridge before assistance arrived.

In escaping he caught Miss Breham by the hair and dragged her down the stairway as he ran down the steps. All of the women screamed but failed to arouse the men in the neighborhood in time for any of them to affect the capture of the intruder. Miss Breham lives in Decatur and is prostrated.

KNOCKS OUT NEW RATES.

Injunction Against Modern Woodmen Head Camp is Perpetual.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 22.—Holding the new rates adopted by the head camp of the Modern Woodmen, at the meeting in Chicago in January, 1912, to be burdensome and unnecessary, Judge Robert Shirely, of the Sangamon circuit court, today granted a perpetual injunction restraining the head camp from putting the rates into effect and also restraining the officers from declaring delinquent any member refusing to pay the new rates. The injunction is effective everywhere as Illinois is the home of the organization. The petition for an injunction was filed by four members, P. E. Tainter, James M. Brown, James H. Wallace and Frank J. Koch, all of this city, last August.

Massie. The jury fixed the penalty at fifteen years in the penitentiary.

Muncie, Ind., Nov. 22.—Dr. H. E. Barnard, chief chemist of the Indiana pure food commission, made a talk here yesterday afternoon on "The Consumer's Relation to the Pure Food Movement," at the semi-annual meeting of the federated clubs of this city. Dr. Barnard declared that the responsibility for the enforcement of the food laws lies with the consumers themselves. He discussed conditions in general and gave a resume of the pure food movement in Indiana. Dr. Caroline Hedger, of Chicago, spoke on "How to Rear a Child," and gave some valuable information to the mothers.

URGES CHIVALRY IN THE SCHOOLS

Dr. Crafts Speaks to Students on Essentials of Manliness.

IS REFORM WORKER

"A cigar or cigarette is a package of nicotine, with a fire on one end and a fool on the other. When a boy first tries to smoke he don't like the sensation, and when he takes his first drink he don't like the taste. He keeps at it, however, until he acquires the habit. The only reason we smoke, drink or swear is because somebody else does. You think it will make you manly, and everybody else says, 'Look at the little fool.'"

Before a large audience composed of students at the High school this morning Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, of Washington, D. C., a lecturer of the International Reform Bureau, spoke for almost an hour on the subject, "The Essentials of Manliness." Dr. Crafts urged the appointment of chivalry committees in each class of the High school as a safeguard against any member of the different classes taking the wrong road, and to preserve the honor of the school.

"Every boy expects to be a gentleman, and every girl expects to be a lady. Clothes are not essential to make a gentleman, and neither is wealth. Politeness is one of the essentials. Don't slap people's feelings. You may as well slap their faces, and don't fight unless somebody says something about a woman. It is rowdy to speak ill about people or God.

Maintain Your Rank.

"No gentleman will swear. Swearing goes against the foundation of manliness. Maintain your rank among men and women, and you can do this by eliminating dowdyness, for it is neither brave, well nor wise."

Dr. Crafts declared that a boy places his fists in his mouth before he is old enough to speak. After he speaks, he fills his mouth with damns, drams ad cigarettes and spits for punctuation marks.

"In illustrating another phase of manliness, I speak about gambling. Why do people gamble? Is there any need for it? I believe that the people who gamble are those who lack a vocabulary, and when they run to the end of their argument, they dig up some money and say, 'Put up or shut up; money talks.' It does talk with the fellow who cannot talk himself.

Be Independent.

"Every boy and every man and woman should be independent. Don't agree with somebody else just because they think their way of saying or doing everything is right. Have a mind of your own, and be in position to place your mind's arguments. Think your own thoughts and do according to what you think."

In closing Dr. Crafts urged the boys and girls to be up-to-date, warning them that up-to-dateness does not mean in the cut of your hair or the style of your dress. He declared that lots of people are baldheaded on the inside. He told in forceful manner about the poison of alcohol and urged every boy and girl to live in such a manner that at all times they will have perfect control of themselves, morally, physically and spiritually.

The program this morning was one of interest. Under the direction of Prof. Mies the High school glee club entertained the students with a number of songs, and Prof. Lane delivered a brief address. The invocation was pronounced by Rev. Guild, of the First Methodist Episcopal church.

MISS FARLEY TO SOON KNOW FATE

Girl Accused of Zollinger Murder in State of Nervous Collapse.

FROM TRYING ORDEAL

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 22.—The fate of Miss Cecelia Farley, state office stenographer, charged with first degree murder in connection with the shooting of Alvin E. Zollinger, advertising solicitor, in a city park last May, is expected to be in the hands of the jury late this afternoon. When court resumed this morning only the arguments of the attorneys and the judge's charge to the jury remained to be made.

It was considered likely that arguments and the court's charge would be made probably by 3 or 4 o'clock this afternoon.

As a result of the ruthless cross examination by the prosecutor yesterday Miss Farley, who was on the witness stand fourteen hours and who broke down when the gruelling was concluded by a narration of the shooting and a demonstration of just how the defendant said the gun was held when Zollinger was shot, was said to be in a state of nervous collapse today. Her attorneys declared, however, that she would be able to take her place in the court room to hear the summing up of the arguments and the charge of the jury.

KILLS WIFE; TRIES SUICIDE.

George Sage, Terre Haute Man, Enacts Frightful Tragedy.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 22.—George Sage, a retired business man of this city, this afternoon killed his wife by cutting her throat with a butcher knife and then attempted suicide with the same weapon. He is in a critical condition with slight chances for recovery. Sage recently retired from business owing to failing health and has been under the care of physicians. He was a member of a well known family.

The tragedy was discovered by a physician whom Sage called to the house shortly before noon. The the doctor arrived an hour later he discovered the blood stains on the window and investigation discolsed the dead body of the woman lying on the floor of the bed room and Sage was discovered in an adjoining room, unconscious from stabs in the breast and throat. At the hospital it was said that he cannot recover.

HERE'S AL WALSH, KICKED INTO CONGRESS BY HIS INDIGNANT EMPLOYER.

ALLAN B. WALSH.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 21.—After all, honesty is the best policy. If you don't believe that look at Allan B. Walsh, once an expert mechanic in greasy overalls, but just now the well-groomed congressman-elect from the Trenton (N. J.) district, and looking every inch the part.

"Be good and you'll succeed," is a maxim Al Walsh learned when he was a boy. He believed it when he went to work as a youth in the huge Roebling plant at Trenton—the electric wire trust. He believed it when he worked his nails off for his employers, gradually climbing from one job to a better one until he was an expert tester of electric wires and cables. He believed it when his friends—and incidentally the Roeblings—encouraged him to run for the legislature.

The Roeblings, you know, are one of those philanthropic corporations that is willing to sacrifice the time of an employe occasionally that he may serve society by holding an office. They are frightfully uiselfish about it.

So it was not surprising that Walsh should run for the legislature. It was not surprising that he was elected, for he was popular and the Woodrow Wilson landslide of 1910 helped him.

Then Walsh's education began to expand. He discovered that other people—notably his employers—didn't share his conviction. When he told them he could not vote for ex-United States Senator "Jim" Smith, the democratic boss, for election to the senate, they reminded him that they had loaned him money—which he had repaid—to build his home. That didn't seem just right to Walsh, but he innocently voted against Smith, never dreaming such a patriotic institution as the Roebling company would stoop to harm him.

The next pay day his wages were cut in two That should have been a lesson to Walsh, but it wasn't. He voted for governor Wilson's law establishing a fixed set of payments that would have to be made to men who got hurt while working for big concerns like the Roeblings. And on the next pay day he got the "blue envelope."

Any young man of 36, with a wife and three young children, is likely to feel a little "blue" himself under such circumstances. About this time his conviction began to blossom. An enterprising reporter dug up the facts about Walsh's dismissal. An indignant public let out a roar and a tax board, with a sense of decency, gave Walsh a job as secretary. When the primaries rolled around last September, nobody in the Trenton district even seeriously suggested anybody for the democratic nomination for congress but Al Walsh. It went to him on a platter, but the Trenton district is normally 5,000 republican, and folks were prepared to be satisfied with seeing Walsh merely "honored" by the nomination. Walsh had different plans. He'd been honest Therefore, he didn't see any reason why he shouldn't be elected. He got a horse and buggy and criss-crossed the district, and the morning of November 6 New Jersey got up and rubbed her eyes. He had been elected by a plurality of 5,000.

COMBINATION

The word "combination" is not here used in its ordinary, modern, business sense.

It has reference to the happy combination that has made this bank the great success that everyone knows it to have been.

It refers to the fact that the officers are practical and successful bankers, while the directors are practical and successful business men.

That makes a combination mighty hard to beat, especially when the officers and directors all pull together.

This bank also combines the safety of a national bank with the conveniences of a savings bank. It maintains a saving department where interest is paid at the rate of 4 per cent.

BRAKEMAN WINS FIGHT FOR JOB

Legless Man is Elected to Office After Hard Fight.

ADVANCE IS MARVEL

Denver, Colo., Nov. 21.—From helper in a round house to Couty Treasurer is a part of the life story of Samuel J. Bryan, democratic Treasurer elect of El Paso county, this state.

Crippled in a railroad wreck six years ago and so seriously injured that surgeons declared he could not survive, handicapped by lack of education, Bryan's steady climb up the ladder is referred to by his friends as an example of what pluck and perseverance will do. Bryan's friends gave him a plurality of neary 1,000.

While he was working as a brakeman on the Colorado Midland road about six years ago, Bryan was knocked under the cars in a wreck. Both legs were cut off and other injuries were such that death was only a matter of hours, the surgeons declared.

But Bryan had a strong desire to live. He passed two years on a hospital cot, during which time he underwent eight operations. Then he decided to quit the dangerous work of railroading, but feared that his lack of education would prove a big handicap. His wife urged him to devote his time to study, and between them they decided upon a course in bookkeeping and accounting. Bryan made rapid progress in his studies, invested his savings in cork limbs, and started out after leaving the hospital to find a job.

His friends of the road elected him secretary and treasurer of the Order of Trainmen, and his work in that capacity was performed so satisfactorily that other lodges elected him to similar offices. Bryan wasn't satisfied to be a lodge clerk long, however, Two years ago his friends urged him to run for the office of justice of the peace. He remurred, because he knew nothing of law, and even justices, he thought, should know something of jurisprudence.

Again Bryan and his wife discussed matters, and he decided to study criminal and civil legal practice. After completing the course he ran for office and was elected by a big majority.

City Water Only by Meter.

By January 1, it is announced, all water consumers in Fort Wayne will be on a meter basis, as the installation of meters to replace the old flat-rate system will have been completed by that time. This work was begun many months ago, and as rapidly as possible attaches of the city waterworks department have connected up meters to the service pipes at points where formerly payment was made at a so-called "flat rate," based upon the size of the residence or the character of the business establishment served. The "flat rate" is a relic of the early and experimental days of the waterworks system, but the arrangement was never an equitable one either to the economical water consumer or to the department which found itself practically powerless to check wanton waste.

As a means of conserving the water supply and of distributing the burden of expense equitably, the making of the meter system universal is about the best step ever taken in the interest of the city's splendid water plant, though there was terrific objection to it in some quarters when it was undertaken as an imperative business proposition. With waste eliminated and every consumer paying for exactly the quantity of water he uses—no more and no less—the advantages of the meter system will be quickly apparent in the revenues of the department, now heavily taxed to meet the demand for extension of water lines to steadily expanding sections of the city. A few years ago, in order to "catch up," the discount which had been given for prompt payment was eliminated. With the meter system and a somewhat easier fuel situation, the board of public works may a little later find it possible to again give the public the benefit of the rate discount.

After all, there is little occasion to smile over the statement of one of the candidates on the republican state ticket that his expense account for the campaign included an expenditure of $6 for candy for stenographers employed at the state and county headquarters of his party. A glance at the election figures would indicate that the returns from the candidate's graciousness to stenographers could hardly have been less than that which came as a result of political expenditure in other directions of republican candidates in Indiana this year.

The fact that this country had a presidential election a few weeks ago is recalled by the fact that out in California they are still wrangling over whether Governor Wilson or Colonel Roosevelt shall have the vote of that state in the electoral college. The fact that it cannot possibly make any difference in the general result does not appear to have robbed the situation of its seriousness in the eyes of the California voter, however little attention the rest of the country may be inclined to pay to it.

Over at Columbus, O., scores of men and women have been participating in a daily football rush to get inside a court room to absorb the salacious details attending a most revolting murder hearing, and in one of the mad scramble for a point of vantage up near the witness stand one woman suffered a fracture of the arm. Some phases of human nature simply defy explanation upon any hypothesis of decency. This is one of them.

25 CENT "DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR AND DANDRUFF—GROWS HAIR

Don't pay 50 cents for worthless hair tonics—Use old, reliable, harmless "Danderine"—Get results

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast.

A little Danderine tonight—now—anytime—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application you will say it was the best investment you ever made. Your hair will immediately take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.—Adv.

TRY HIM ONCE MORE?

(New York World.)

Always amiable, Mr. Taft in defeat is positively plastic. Perhaps if a bill reducing the cost of living were presented to him now he would sign it.

The old congress will not have much time for experiments, but it might try at least one. Schedule K of the Payne-Aldrich law taxes wool and woolens chiefly in the interests of the shepherds and the mills. It has been denounced by republicans as well as democrats and by Mr. Taft himself.

It was the wool schedule that Mr. Taft and his party had in mind when in 1909 they promised immediate revision downward.

The wool bill which Mr. Taft vetoed was not only in line with his promises and his party platform, but it was supported in both houses by republicans and it was drawn with some regard to the findings of the tariff board.

We think there is a natural desire on the part of the people to see whether Mr. Taft is as docile as he appears to be. Within four years they have voted three times in favor of cheaper clothing and blankets. Perhaps in the excess of good nature with which he now contemplates his retirement to private life he would kindly humor a nation which for the greater part of his term he has resisted and thwarted.

THE COAL SITUATION.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 21, 1912.—Editor The Sentinel: There has been a great deal of comment lately in the newspapers of this country relative to the extreme high prices of hard and soft coal. There have been several reasons advanced; one lays the blame on the wholesaler and jobber, another on the railroads, another on the dealer and still another on the operator. But not any one of these is to blame. The writer, who has watched conditions for many years, gives the following review gathered from his experiences in the coal trade:

You will find that we have practically the same conditions every year, insofar as hard coal is concerned, for the reason that the consumer forgets or is loath to put in his supply of hard coal for the following winter, after the worry and strife is over in the spring, because he will tie up his money for several months without return. He does not realize that he can take advantage of the lower prices and give his favorite dealer time in which to buy and receive his hard coal by so doing in the summer months. His dealer can and will deliver his customer's coal at this time when business is lightest and his horses are eating their heads off in their stalls.

As it is now, everybody demands hard coal at once. This immediately swamps the operator with orders that he cannot fill in rotation, for the demand is fifty times greater than the supply—car shortage occurs—for hard coal cannot be shipped in any equipment. Immediately the operator offers his coal to the highest bidder. This boosts the price, as the peak load comes all at once, and the dealer as well as the consumer suffers. Unfortunately, the hard coal business is in the hands of a few operators who are closely allied and take advantage of our "hindthought" every year.

In all quarters one hears every day the cry that the wholesaler is robbing them for steam coal as well as coal for domestic use. This trouble can be traced to its origin very quickly when one considers the strike that is now at its height in the eastern fields, the extreme car shortage on all rail shipments, because of the rush of coal to lake ports for northwestern consumption before weather conditions stop all vessel movement. Also because of the general exodus of foreign labor to the war in the Balkan states.

In the case of soft coal the operator is not to blame for he is unable to secure adequate car supply or enough help to properly operate his mines. Therefore, the wholesaler is obliged to put in his bid for coal and pay whatever is asked and be satisfied, and pray for lower prices. Yours very truly,

E. W. WILLIAMS COAL CO.

JUDGE HENCH RETURNS.

Was Investigating Accident at Indianapolis Monument.

Judge Samuel M. Hench returned home Thursday night from Indianapolis, where for three days he participated in the investigation of the death of three-year-old Robert Polsgrove, who on August 29 fell from the Soldiers' & Sailors' monument. Judge Hench is a member of the Indiana Soldier and Sailors' Monument commission. The other members are Major G. V. Menzies and Ex-Attorney General Ketcham.

The accident last summer was the first of its kind, and the monument commission is conducting a rigid investigation into the cause of the tragedy. The investigation has been continued until December 6, for the purpose of securing one more witness.

The investigation brought out the fact that the boy's mother with two other relatives started to walk up the monument. After going three floors, the boy was brought back to the foot of the structure. He was left there while the others continued their trip up the monument. It is believed that in the absence of his parent, the lad ventured up the monument, and in trying to scare some pigeons from the roosting place, lost his footing and fell. Ex-Sheriff Stout, of Allen county, is in charge of the monument elevator, and stated that the boy did not ride up to the point from which he fell.

THE INCREASED COST OF LIVING.

(Kansas City Star.)

Professor Irving Fisher of Yale university is devoting much time to the advocacy of an ingenious plan for maintaining a uniform monetary standard. His proposal is to regulate the value of the dollar so as to make it conform with the average level of community values; in other words, he would cease to coin gold and abolish the present standard gold dollar, but continue to use gold as the money of ultimate redemption, changing from time to time the quantity of gold that a dollar calls for. It is Professor Irving's belief that the prime cause of the increased cost of living is the greatly enlarged supply of gold that has come into use as money in recent years, and the purpose of his plan is to maintain stability of prices.

Without going into a discussion of the quantity theory of the value of money, to which Professor Fisher gives more importance than some other thinkers of equal authority, including J. A. Hobson of England, it is worth while to call attention to just one circumstance which certainly has been a potent factor in creasing the cost of the necessities of life. That is the disproportionate growth in urban and rural population.

Ten years ago 51.3 per cent of the people of the United States lived outside of incorporated towns and constituted, practically, the farming population. In 1910 the proportion was only 44.8 per cent. In ten years there was an increase of 13,608,081 in the population of cities and towns, and an addition of only 2,279,610 to the rural population. The increase was 37 per cent in cities and towns and only 9.4 per cent on the farms.

It seems quite p[illegible] a rise in the price of the necessiti[illegible] an inevitable result of this [illegible] crease in the number of consumers in the number of producers. The growth of farm population is not keeping pace with the increase in the inhabitants in cities, which means that demand for food products is increasing faster than the growth in the supply. Isn't that the most immediate and most rational explanation of the increased cost of living?

KEEP OFF THE TRACKS!

(South Bend Times.)

The Engineering News has compiled statistics which show that twice as many persons are killed by the cars for being on the tracks as are killed in riding as passengers, or as employes of the road. The figures for the last year given in round numbers are: Passengers killed, 300; employes killed, 3,000; other persons killed, 6,000. Of these "other persons" about 1,000 were on grade crossings, where, presumably both they and the trains had a right to be, and 5,000 were walking the tracks or stealing rides on freight cars where they had neither legal nor moral rights.

The various states, cities and railroads are co-operating to abolish the grade crossings, but if this were accomplished it would save only one-sixth of the lives now lost. The only safety for the other five-sixths is to KEEP OFF THE TRACKS.

WISE LEGISLATIVE DIRECTION.

(Ligonier News.)

Governor Marshall, with the discretion for which he is noted, showed wisdom by appointing Representative Joseph M. Cravens of Madison, Senator James P. Netterville of Anderson, democrats, and Representative Jesse Eschbach of Warsaw, republican, to serve as members of the legislative visitation committee who will visit all state departments and institutions, ascertain [illegible] requirements, and afterward make recommendations for appropriation bills. The newly chosen members of the committee will begin their duties instanter, and it is intended to have the report ready for the next session of the legislature. In relation to the program of the democratic legislative steering committee, its members will consist of Governor Marshall, Governor-elect Ralston, Auditor O'Brien, Treasurer Vellmer, Attorney General Honan and Supreme Court Clerk France. With such an array of talent the issues should be determined with wisdom, and the legislation necessary to formulate with the most complete of confidence. This committee, having charge of this legislative program, will act in accordance with the democratic platform outlined during the campaign, and the pledges given the people of Indiana will be carried out.

ST. PAUL SCHOOL HALL.

Union Labor Makes Request to the Church Board.

A special meeting of the church board of the St. Paul Lutheran church was held Thursday afternoon, to compile the figures submitted in the bids for the building of the new school hall which it is proposed to erect. There were eleven bids submitted by the contractors, received at the office of the architect, J. M. E. Riedel, for the general contract and six for teh heating, lighting and plumbing.

During the session of the board a committee from the Building Trades Council, headed by the president, Charles Krider, and the business agent of the Carpenters' union, Charles Easley, called and requested the board to make provisions by which only union labor would be employed in erecting the new building.

The labor representatives explained that all the members of the trades affiliated with the Building Trades Council have signed an agreement not to work on any contract where non-union men are employed. The church board has not yet taken any action in regard to the matter.

BOARD WILL GET FIGURES ON JOB

Valuable Property Would Have to Be Condemned to Widen Taylor.

A BIG IMPROVEMENT

Members of the board of public works will get an estimate of the cost of widening Broadway at Taylor street in response to a request from the Sixth Ward Civic Improvement association and will then submit the matter to the organization.

Some valuable property will have to be condemned but it will greatly improve the approach to the Wabash subway and the citizens want it done. The cost will fall upon the benefited property which will be duly assessed.

A request that the Beers-Offutt Construction company be allowed to close Broadway while the concrete is being put in for the Wabash tracks was flatly refused. Some time ago the board outlined its plans for this work and the company was notified today that it will be expected to follow instructions.

A plat was ordered showing the proposed opening of Second street to Clark street, and a petition for ornamental lighting on Lewis street from Calhoun to Lafayette was taken under advisement.

Assessment rolls were confirmed for paving Weisser Park avenue, from Wallace street to Weisser park; paving the alley between Calhoun and Harrison streets, from Wayne to Washington; paving of Nevada avenue from Florida drive to Forest Park boulevard, and for sidewalks on Lillie street, from the south line of Federal Park place addition to Pontiac street.

The Moellering Construction company reported the Wells street pavement completed and an assessment roll was ordered.

Notes of the City Hall.

Chief Hilbrecht and his inspection crew will begin work under the new fire protection ordinance about Dec. 1. A complete record of all inspections will be kept.

At a meeting last night the finance committee of the city council approved appropriations of $700 for garbage disposal and $2,500 for street cleaning. The Juday application for liquor license refund was held up.

A meeting of the electric light committee of the council, to which was referred the request of sixty-two business men asking that the new ordinance regulating signs be modified, will be held in the council chamber Monday.

JUDGE RALSTON SPENT $1,380.07

Campaign Expense Account is Filed by Indiana Governor-Elect.

SOME OTHER LISTS

Indianapolis, Nov. 22.—Two gubernatorial candidates, Samuel M. Ralston, democrat, and William H. Hickman, prohibitionist, filed statements of their campaign expenses with the secretary of state yesterday. The expenses of Mr. Ralston, who was successful in his candidacy, amounted to $1,380.07. Mr. Hickman, who finished the race in fifth place, spent $147.50.

Mr. Ralston says he made no promises, that he acted as his own treasurer and that he received contributions from no one.

"I made no promises or deals," states Mr. Hickman. "I made no false statements so far as I know and I treated all candidates square."

More than 1,700 persons contributed to the fund of the prohibition party according to the statement of Charles M. Lemon, treasurer of the state organization, filed yesterday. The total receipts were $8,336.10 and the disbursements amounted to $8,324.23.

A contribution of 25 cents was the only campaign expense of Margaret J. Ott, one of the two women whose names appeared on the socialist state ballot. She was the nominee for chief of the bureau of statistics.

SPEAKS FOR GIOVANNITTI.

Arguments in Salem Murder Case Nearing an End.

Salem, Mass., Nov. 22.—W. Scott Peters planned to conclude today his argument for Arturo Giovannitti in the Ettor-Giovannitti-Caruso trial for the murder of Anna Lopizzo in the Lawrence strike. Following him District Attorney Attwill was to make the closing speech for the commonwealth.

It was expected that the charge to the jury by Judge Quinn would be a long one and that the case would not go to the jury until tomrrow.

Mr. Peters resumed his argument when court convened. Giovannitti's purpose in going to Lawrence, he declared, was "grand and noble," and he compared the young prisoner to Lincoln.

"It is ridiculous to believe that Giovannitti ever made the speech attributed to him, telling the srikers to 'go out and take the blood of the scabs,'" Mr. Peters said. "The speech quoted here by these detectives is absurd, preposterous—absolutely untrue."

LINGENFELTER GETS DIVORCE.

Action Is First Step of Untangling Bigamy Case.

Rushville, Ind., Nov. 22.—The first step in the untangling of the three-cornered bigamy case which was in the Indianapolis police court a month ago was taken today when William Lingenfelter was granted a divorce from his first wife, Myrtle Lingenfelter, known in Indianapolis as Mrs. George Isaacs. Lingenfelter told the story of a faithless wife and his consequent troubles to Judge Blair in the circuit court when the divorce came up for hearing. His first wife, now Mrs. Isaacs, did not appear in court.

CONVENTION IS ON AT HAMMOND

Indiana Y. M. C. A. Gathering Promises to Be Big Success.

PROGRAM GREAT ONE

Hammond, Ind., Nov. 22.—With between 150 and 200 delegates from all parts of the state in attendance at the first afternoon session, the state convention of the Indiana Young Men's Christian association opened in this city today. Reception committees of business men met the various delegates as they arrived after a tour of the Gary steel mills and a luncheon at the Gary association building, and escorted them in autos to the Methodist church, where they were registered and assigned to the hospitable homes of Hammond for entertainment during the convention.

The association secretaries and speakers are quartered at the Carleton hotel, where the state committee has established its headquarters.

While the delegates were dining in Gary a band of association experts in industrial work were holding meetings in the shops and factories of Hammond and vicinity. These were in charge of A. B. Minear, Dr. Peter Roberts, Abraham Bowers, of the international committee, and E. L. Mogge, general secretary at Evansville. The meetings took place at the Conkey publishing plant, the Betz mail order house, the Gibson and the C. I. & S. car shops.

The convention opened at 3 o'clock this afternoon with an address by Rev. Clarence A. Barbour, of Rochester, N. Y., of the international committee, on "White Fields," in which he outlined the tremendous possibilities and opportunities awaiting the magic touch of association workers.

Annual reports were presented later in the afternoon by Chairman John C. Haswell, of Marion, and Treasurer John F. Wallick, of Indianapolis, for the state executive committee. Henry M. Dowling, of Indianapolis, who was elected president of the state association last year, presided at the session.

The big event of the day is the business men's dinner in the evening at the Masonic Temple, for which 400 tickets have been sold. E. G. Eberhardt, general manager of the Michawaka, Ind., Woolen Manufacturing company, will preside. The principal address of the occasion will be delivered by Fairfax Harrison, president of the Monon railroad on the subject, "Are We Ready for Industrial Co-operation?" Dr. Roberts, immigration secretary, will discuss "Practical Work for Foreigners," and State Secretary Stacy will give an illustrated talk on Indiana's new buildings and activities.

The Saturday session will be devoted largely to convention business, such as committee reports, election of officers for the new year, invitations for the 1913 convention and the announcement of speakers who will fill the local pulpits in all the churches Sunday morning. The afternoon will be occupied at 3 o'clock by conference of city, railroad and student association delegates. Dr. Peter Roberts, Thomas E. Kline, engineer of the Hoosier Limited; Mr. Hurrey and Dr. Barbour are slated to appear before these conferences.

Saturday evening Dr. Steiner, of Iowa college, will address the boys of Hammond at a dinner for their benefit. Sunday afternoon will be made memorable by the three mass meetings, one each for men, women and boys.

Mrs. C. D. Andrews, of Culver, is recovering from a severe illness at the home of her mother, Mrs. Nulf, on East Creighton avenue.

Wallace, on a charge made by his wife that he was endangering her life. Miller arrested Wallace and had just placed him in the village lockup. The arrest was attended by considerable excitement, Wallace having threatened Miller's life with his revolver, which Miller took from him only after a struggle. BRESNAHAN GAVE SLEUTH BEATING

Man Who Shadowed Him Was Also Shadowed and Got a Thumping.

FOLLOWED MANAGER

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 22.—No longer do they tell of "the good old days" in baseball when the festive athlete went out at nights, crooked the elbow and elevated the feet and played poker at the rate of $1 per ante. For they don't do things that way—"no mob," and the magnates are much addicted to lawyers, stool pigeons and gum-shoes, says the St. Louis Times.

A good one in connection with the Bresnahan dismissal has just come to light. It has been known in some quarters for considerable weeks, but it is now such public property that nobody violates a confidence printing it.

The "lady magnateas" in spite of declarations to the contrary, had almost all summer been seeking some advance dope about the duke. To this end a pussy-foot connected with a concern much addicted to the dictagraph and municipal graft cases, likewise dynamiters who blow up bridges in the night, was sicked on the duke's trail.

Now, in the cold winter months, R. P. Bresnahan has been one of those things himself, connected with the Toledo police department. It didn't take him long to get Jerry to the fly. A friend on the New York force shadowed the shadow. Roger met up with the pussy-foot one evening on the Brooklyn bridge, and revised his geography to such an extent that he needed a long vacation. Then the duke went to bed and slept soundly. Having considerable drag with the New York police, the matter never became public.

A certain player on the Browns who in previous years had been known to consume liquor signed a contract last spring calling for a certain salary and $800 more if he kept in condition all season. He kept fairly well and was able to play ball whenever requested. When he went to collect prior to the city series he was confronted with a detective's statement showing where he had been discovered in the heinous crime of entering a gin emporium. His employer compromised by giving him $300 instead of $800, thereby saving the difference between $800 and what it cost to hire the rubber heels.

The player was indignant and denounced the club owner in the presence of the assembled athletics in the clubhouse. Then he went back to the coast with his new wife and left word that he was mighty glad to shake a section of the national pastime which saves $285 by snooping around by means of detectives.

There are many more things in modern baseball than happen on the field or in the papers.

WIND UP SEASON WITH A BANQUET

Friars Will Give Up Training Rules and Eat Pie After Last Game.

JUST A WEEK LONGER

Members of the Friar football squad who have been keeping themselves in condition for their hard games by refraining from indulgences that are disastrous to athletic training, will cut right into a feast at the close of the final game on Thanksgiving and pie, mince and other brands tabooed for a couple of months will be allowed those who have forsaken it for the good of their work on the gridiron.

Now, don't think for a minute that the Friars would have the good public believe that for two months none of the football players has tasted pie or that any one of them has curbed his appetite to that degree required at a training table. It is certain, however, that most of them have refrained from indulgences and that they have proven it by the fact that they have been able to stick through some gruelling battles at League park.

The banquet is tendered by the members of the Friar club to the football players and will be held at the Anthony hotel and the Corby hall players will be guests.

Before Corby hall, however, comes Huntington. If there is one thing more than another that the average Huntington citizen had rather do it is to have one of its teams, whether fotball, baseball, horse shoes or pinochle, beat a Fort Wayne opponent.

In most things they have failed but the whole population is banking on the football players and the men are working hard to get in trim for the battle carded here Sunday afternoon. Several players from Huntington have attended the games played here by the Friars to get a line on the work of the Fort Wayne club, and just what they have learned and what good it will do the squad will be proven at the Sunday game.

Right here in Fort Wayne it is expected that Huntington will be beaten. The club has been maintained all fall for the sole purpose of playing the Friars, and it will come well backed by a big band of rooters.

In the Corby hall game the Friars expect to win. Last season the offense was a little weak against the college-trained athletes but it is stronger this season, and the home guard is out to win and every man on the club is full of confidence.

The final practice of the Huntington game will be held tomorrow afternoon at League park, and all of the players are requested to be out.

Imperial union underwear to fit any man at $1.00, or 50c less than any other store.

BIG BROTHER EXPECTS YOUNG JACK O'BRIEN WILL BE CHAMPION OF ALL FOUR CLASSES.

"Young Jack" O'Brien, who left college to become a prize fighter and save the family name when Sam Langford defeated his brother, "Philadelphia Jack," has started off like an all-conquering hero.

He is regarded today as a possible lightweight champion, and his brother predicts he will successively become champion of all classes up to, and including the heavyweights.

No one will deny that "Philadelphia Jawn" is qualified to predict a ring career. He has had experience enough to know a future great from a bloomer.

When enrolled at Mt. St. Mary's college "Young Jack" was John Thomas Augustine Hagan, but when he took to the ring he adopted the name made famous by his brother, and as "Young Jack" O'Brien is picking up fame rapidly.

This youngster, but 18, is declared to be the fastest lightweight that ever pulled on a glove; to be as scientific as his brother ever was; to be a ring general of ability and to "pack a punch" that has chloroform beaten a whiff, as a sleep maker.

After "Philly Jawn" had been defeated by Ketchel and Langford, the young brother quit school and demanded that Jack train him.

But "Old Jack" refused. He doubted the boy's ability, so the youngster began teaching himself. In May, 1911, in an amateur tournament in Philadelphia "Young Jack" did things to his opponents that were sinful.

Promoters hailed him as a future champion, but his brother was not convinced. In August, 1911, a preliminary boxer "ran out at O'Brien's club at the last minute and O'Brien was in despair until "Young Jack" begged for the chance to go on.

Big brother grudgingly gave little brother a chance with fear in his heart, and was the most surprised man in the house when the "kid" made his opponent look like a novice.

"Boy, you're the goods! I'll train you, all right," exclaimed Jack, delightedly.

This was more than a year ago. Since that night "Young Jack" has been in more than thirty fights and has never met defeat. Once he was floored by Wolgast, lightweight champion. He easily outboxed Wolgast, and in addition has met K. O. Brown, Young Erne, Tommy Langdon, Young Brown, Letach Cross and other lightweights.

"The boy is growing fast," says the original Jack. "But before he is too heavy for the class he will win the lightweight title. As he grows heavier I'll send him through the classes successively, and I believe he'll win the title in each class up to and including the heavies.

"He ought to weigh 190 when fully developed, by which time he will have the experience to return him winner over the world's best."

"Young Jack" is a whirlwind in the ring. He uses the crouch of his brother, hits hard and true and devotes his leisure to studying blows and their effects. He says he has been successful because he has the best teacher in the world in his brother, to whom he gives all the credit for bringing him to the front.

JOHN THOMAS AUGUSTINE HAGAN, KNOWN AS "YOUNG JACK O'BRIEN" IN CHARACTERISTIC FIGHTING POSES.

WANT DUBUC AS A COACH.

Pitcher Says He Has a Flattering Offer from French Union.

Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 22.—Joan Dubuc, star pitcher of the Detroits during the past season, admits that he has received an offer from a representative of the Paris club of the French Union Baseball leatgue to coach that nine for a period of five years, the sum offered being $3,000 more than he has asked the Detroit club to give him next season.

Dubuc has been visiting in this city, and left to return to his home in Montreal. The story that he had been offered a position as coach in France was published in New York, and when interviewed, Dubuc admitted that he had received it, and said he would give the Tigers the first chance at his services next season. Dubuc says AndyC oakley and Tommy McCarthy, of Boston, have also received offers to go to Paris.

ALL ELSE FORGOTTEN.

Harvard Eager for Battle With Yale on Gridiron Tomorrow.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 22.—Activities among the student body of Harvard university today were directed entirely to preparation for tomorrow's game between Harvard and Yale elevens. Nearly one-third of the students planned to start during the day for New Haven, and most of the other students will leave Boston for New Haven tomorrow morning. Noon saw the departure of the last of the team, with a demonstrative sendoff by the undergraduates. The squad will assemble this afternoon at New London, where they will remain until the start for Yale field, a few hours before the game. Confidence that Harvard would win was general in this city and Boston. Only a few speculators had tickets to sell, and these were quoted at about $50 a pair. The odds were 10 to 7 on Harvard.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 22.—Coach Sheldon let the Indiana university football squad rest today, prescribing only blackboard work on the eve of the principal game of the season, that with Purdue at Lafayette tomorrow. Although the team has not won a conference game this year, Indiana supporters believe the down-state eleven will wind up the season gloriously by defeating Purdue.

The entire squad is in good shape and will be accompanied to Lafayette tomorrow by a big train load of rooters.

BAKER HITS THE BALL TOO OFTEN

His Batting Breaks the Spirit of the Cubans and They Quit Americans.

RIGLER'S TRIP IS OFF

Havana, Nov. 22.—The mighty slugging of Frank Baker, hero of the 1911 world's series between the New York Giants and the Philadelphia Athletics, has soured all Cuba on American baseball teams, and as soon as the present trip of the White Elephants is concluded Cuban teams will play among themselves and never again tamper with the really good teams of the American major leagues.

It has been Baker's delight to come to bat in pinches ever since landing in this city and send careening to the fence one of those wonderful slashing drives of his, ending the hopes of the home team to take the victory. Baker has killed the golden goose of the Cuban diamonds. Sunday's victory by the Athletics over the Almendares, the result of Bender's air-tight pitching and Baker's murderous slugging has completely broken the spirit of the Cubans.

Cy Rigler, the National league umpire, who has been gathering a team of National league players for a trip to this city, has been notified that the deal is off. The fans here are enraged at the treatment handed their best pitchers by the batsmen of the Athletics, and the way their sluggers are made to look ridiculous by the great twirling of Bender, Plank and Coombs.

"I have called off the trip of Rigler's team," said the promoter, "because it would surely result in heavy losses. The Havana fans expected at least an even break with the Athletics. Instead, they have seen their pets defeated with ridiculous ease. Now they refuse to look at any more games.

"The last time we came to Havana," said Eddie Collins, captain of the barnstorming Athletics, "we made no pretense at playing good ball. It was a joy ride for us. We had just copped the world's championship and the strain was off. This year, though, we have attended to our knitting. We haven't tried to let the home boys win whenever possible. We have gone right along playing the kind of ball we played all during the past season. I'm sorry we have spoiled the game for Rigler's bunch, but we're not down here to be beaten. We haven't seen any pitching yet that we can't solve, and, say, the way Bender, Coombs and Plank are fooling those sluggers, it's really a shame."

We show the largest line of outing flannel night shirts in the city, 50c, $1.00 and $1.50.

MISS SPINDLER'S RECITAL.

Young Pianist Displayed Remarkable Poise and Talent in Difficult Program.

Before an audience of two hundred people Miss Helene Spindler, a piano student of the European School of Music, gave a beautiful recital under the auspices of the school, in the auditorium of the city high school building last evening. Assisting Miss Spindler was Mrs. Clara Zollars-Bond and her accompanist, Mrs. Leah Cohen Maloy. Miss Spindler played nine numbers, each of which was exacting in technical and intellectual demands and in the playing of all she displayed a brilliance of execution and a comprehensive grasp of the works themselves that were astonishing for so young a performer. While her intelligent perception and musical understanding of her program is the result of her instruction from her teacher, George Bailhe, with whom Miss Spindler has been studying for two and a half years, her playing in no wise was that of an imitator. In every number the careful listener realized the individuality of the young performer and her astonishing poise, which appears to be in no way the result of over assurance, but rather that of marked talent. Her memory is exact and dependable.

Miss Spindler opened with two MacDowell compositions, a serenade and an Etude de Concert. The latter was especially pleasing. Her playing of the Chopin sonate, the one of the much abused funeral march, was very satisfying. Perhaps no other number of her program better illustrated the poise of her musical feeling, though possibly that very element of Miss Spindler's playing might give rise to criticism. Her quiet manner and her entire freedom from any mannerism may possibly be considered as a lack of imagination, but an unbounded imagination that lacks the poise of judgment is never pleasing for any length of time and no one thing of this young girl's playing is more promising of future greatness than this very absence of anything that might be considered erratic. Details of Miss Spindler's technical equipment are a deep and virile tone, one not merely loud, clear cut phrasing and evenly balanced chords and runs, wonderfully fine pedaling, and when necessary a delicacy of touch that was charming. "The Wind," by Alkan, was a fine example of such work and Miss Spindler played it beautifully, though no less so than she did a difficult etude by d'Schlosser as an encore, or the Dubois "La Source Enchantee" and the Moszkowski tarantelle with such excellent rhythmic effect. Miss Spindler also played the difficult Saint-Saens toccato from the fifth concerto and the Liszt rhapsodie, No. 12. Mrs. Bond sang a group of songs in splendid style. Her first was a selection from a new Italian opera, "Belinda," by Veracini, and was a lovely song of the pastoral order. "Ah! Love But a Day," by Protheroe, and a Norwegian love song, exceedingly dramatic, were the other two numbers. In each and in the encore Mrs. Bond displayed her finished skill as a vocalist and the interpretative power, always a marked and delightful feature of hersinging. Mrs. Malay played an excellent accompaniment.

Miss Spindler is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Spindler, of Mechanic street. She comes naturally by her musical talent, as her father was a violinist of skill until ill-health interfered with his pleasure in that direction, and to his encouragement Miss Helene owes some of her success. Her first studies at the piano were under the direction of Miss W. Schulz, and later with Miss Jessamine Bailey, with whom she studied for some time. About nine months' work with Mrs. Anna Siboni Ruhland and since that time under the instruction of Mr. Bailhe, this young and talented student is making a progress that is rapid and steady. She bids fair to take her place in a few years with the great women pianists of the world.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

The interest of the German people of the city centers today in the German production of the peasant players of Oberamergau, who will produce the famous five-act rural drama "Almenrausch und Edelweiss," at the Majestic theater tonight.

The company arrived today from Indianapolis where it played last night before a crowded house. After the engagement here it will return for another engagement to Indianapolis before going to Chicago for a two weeks' stand.

The play tonight is of more than common interest in various ways. A Peasant company is original in this country. These people have been surrounded by the conditions which are presented in the play. The famous "Schuhplattler" dances are a feature, which has never been imitated on the American stage. There will not be any dull moments in the whole performance, as the intermissions will be occupied with German popular songs and other music.

"THE ROSARY."

Whatever else may be said of Rowland and Clifford's new production, "The Rosary," which comes to the Majestic theater for three days starting Monday, Nov. 25, with a bargain matinee Wednesday, the charge of imitation of other plays cannot be made.

"The Rosary" virtually breaks new ground in the dramatic field and should prove a veritable surprise when the curtain rises upon it.

The play is built upon a thoroughly modern theme, viz: the influence of thought upon the lives and well-being of the men and women of our present day.

That thought, intangible and evanescent as it is, is still a force, a power, a theory that has for some time past engaged the serious attention of our foremost psychologists, but its portrayal upon the stage has been neglected heretofore.

"The Rosary" attacks the theme boldly, it deals with the lives and fortunes of a little group of people living in the West Chester country near New York city; the husband is a disbeliever in all religion, his wife a woman of serious conviction regarding faith in the things of life unseen.

Majestic Pictures Saturday.

Owing to the fact that The German Theater company holds the stage this evening there will be no motion pictures at the Majestic today. The pictures will, however, be resumed Saturday matinee and evening and the same excellent films will be presented that have been proving a big attraction at the Majestic during the entire week.

AT THE TEMPLE

The big comedy bill at the Temple this week is certainly delightful, every act is pleasing large houses at every performance. Arthur Dunn & Co. are the big noise this week, presenting "The Messenger Boy." Mr. Dunn is not generally familiar to Fort Wayne audiences, but he will be after this week. He starred last season with "The Runaways." Jean Bedini and Roy Arthur, who style themselves as the jovial jugglers, and they have a right to that name. The smile the two jugglers leave on your face won't come off until you stop thinking about them.

Other acts on the bill are Pistel and Cushing, "The Stranded Minstrels;" Hoey and Mozar presenting "The Lady and Her Groom;" Fields and Coco, European equilibrists; Zenita, the cyclonic dancing violiniste, and the Gaumont Weekly, showing the world's current events.

Charles Wayne and Gertrude Des Roches.

Our own Charles Wayne and Gertrude Des Roches, the prettiest girl in Stageland and the "Incubator Girls," a rollocking one act musical comedy, heads next week's big Temple bill, which looks like the very best of the entire season. That's saying a great deal, but the Temple management declare every act to be a headliner and that will sure make "some show."

KENDALLVILLE NEWS.

Kendallville, Ind., Nov. 22.—Tom Stutz, of Fort Wayne, was the victor in a wrestling match that was pulled off last night at the Modern Woodmen club rooms, when he threw Clyde Zollman, of this city, in two straight falls. The first fall was secured after thirty-one minutes, with the bar and scissor hold. The second one came at the end of an eighteen minute struggle. The hammerlock and half Nelson did the business. Russell Franklin, of Kendallville, was the referee and Hugh Sawyer, of this city, officiated as timekeeper.

Acting under instructions from Mayor Field, Marshal John Boggs notified Newton Shamblin that he must close his place of business within a week. Mr. Shamblin conducts a lunch business in a small building called a car, on North Main street. It is understood the reason for the order is that it is alleged disturbances have occurred at the Shamblin place. Shamblin declares he will resist any attempt to close his business. The mayor probably bases his legal right to put Shamblin out of business on the allegation that the building is not in keeping of the law of fire limits.

The local lodge of Odd Fellows will confer the first degree at Garrett Dec. 5, when the second interurban meeting of the order will occur.

Members of the Kendallville Rebekah lodge are planning to go to Garrett Dec. 12 to attend the meeting of the traction league of that order. The local lodge will confer the degree on that occasion.

FAILED TO GET CASH.

Burglars Made Fruitless Raid on G. R. & I. Depot.

Agent Williams, of Rome City, found the Grand Rapids and Indiana ticket office in topsy-turvy order when he appeared there yesterday morning to open it for business. Burglars had been there the previous night breaking open the money drawer and ticket case in their search for cash, but only succeeded in putting the machinery of the combination lock on the safe out of commission without getting the door open. They got nothing for their trouble. The burglar in his efforts to get into the safe used a sledge and a railway spike, with which he knocked off the knob of the combination lock. No arrests have been made, though suspcions point to some men who had been in Rome City the day before and who are not there now.

MAY RAISE FREIGHT RATES.

Last August the British government intervened in a railway strike in which the management of the roads contended that if they raised the wages of the employes, it would be necessary to increase the freight rates to cover the increased operating expenses. The government now notifies the railway managers that, after sounding public opinion, a bill providing for rate increase will be satisfactory to most of the shipping public and a bill to that effect will be introduced and passed by parliament. A bill had been previously introduced, but proving unsatisfactory to the railways, it was withdrawn.

HAND IN RESIGNATIONS.

The Two Night Policemen at Kendallville Retire From Duty.

Kendallville, Ind., Nov. 22.—As the result of criticisms on the part of the city marshal and others regarding their official conduct during a disturbance that took place two weeks ago, the two night policemen of Kendallville walked into the office of Mayor Field early last night and handed in their resignations, retiring from duty at once. The officers were John Fulk and Lincoln Secor.

As a result there were no night police officers on duty for a few hours. For the Thin and Bloodless!

The thin and bloodless, with pale cheeks, white lips and frail angular physique, of this community have been much interested in the reports of physicians and others concerning the effectiveness of the treatment for increasing the red and white corpuscles of the blood, thus adding color and weight with its accompanying vigor to the depleted system. A gain of from ten to thirty pounds is not at all unusual for several months, while the color improves almost from the beginning. Most good apothecaries supply it in the form of three-grain hyponcuclane tablets, put up in sealed packets, with directions for home use. Its action aids assimilation and absorption of the food eaten very promptly.

POLE CASE WILL GO FROM COUNTY

City's Action to Recover Tax from Traction Company Up Today.

WILL ORDER CHANGE

Judge Samuel L. Morris, representing the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company, successor to the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley Traction company, today filed an affidavit in the Allen circuit court asking a change of venue in the suit brought by the City of Fort Wayne to recover pole tax levied on and paid for several years by the companies that have owned and operated the street car and lighting franchises.

City Attorney Harry G. Hogan is out of the city and Judge Eggeman took no action in the matter. The amount involved in the suit is problematical as for two or three years the company has declined to pay the tax and during the time that it was paid annually it was settled under protest each time on the ground that the law is unconstitutional as it provides a double tax, that paid by the company on its property and the special levy assessed against the poles.

A rule was issued some time ago requiring the company to answer by Nov. 25 and the affidavit is the result of the rule.

Dismissed Their Suit.

After most of the evidence had been heard in the superior court in suit brought by Ernest, Carl and Herman Hammer to set aside the will of their mother, made in favor of Bertha Hammer Spreen, the plaintiffs moved to dismiss their case and Judge Ryan sustained it.

Seeks Big Damages.

William Benedict has entered suit in which he demands $10,000 damages of John and William C. Hagerman, Frederick and Theodore Buesching and William Geake for injuries sustained in the erection of St. Joseph's hospital. He says that a lift used for hoisting stone fell with him because it was improperly operated and that he sustained injuries to one of his legs that kept him in the hospital from the date of the accident, on August 15, until a few days ago. He alleges the injuries are permanent. William C. and C. J. Ryan are his attorneys.

Notes of the Courts.

Charging that her husband made statements reflecting on her fidelity Mabel C. Livergood is asking a divorce from John W. Livergood. She also seeks custody of their children.

Because he could not control his temper sufficiently to keep him from cursing and abusing his wife, Oliver Itskins has been sued for divorce by Minnie Itskins. Colerick and Hogan represent her.

Robert L. Larimore was this afternoon granted a divorce in the circuit court from Lucille Larimore.

Henry C. Schneider, held to the circuit court from the city court, gave bond today for $500 for his appearance.

Articles of incorporation of the Colonial Theater company have been filed with the county recorder. The capital stock is $10,000 and the incorporators are Herman, Beatrice M. and Harriet Heisler.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Prices dropped today as a result of northwestern receipts more than double those of a year ago. May started at 90¼c to 90⅜c, a sixteenth lower to a like amount up and fell to 89⅝@89⅞c.

The close was steady at 90¼c for May, ⅛@¼c under last night.

The close, however, was easy, a shade lower for May at 47½c.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Nov. 22.—Following the lead of London, prices sagged at the opening of the stock market here. Resumption of hostilities in the Balkans was ascribed as the cause of the movement. The declines were confined to fractions, with the exception of Canadian Pacific, which lost a point. A few stocks advanced, with especial strength in Louisville & Nashville, which rose a point.

Pool operations, which were conspicuous feature of the recent advance, apparently were suspended for the time, and speculation narrowed down to the well known issues. An additional engagement of gold for import gave traders an opening to bid up prices against the shorts, but as soon as this buying ceased the list went off again. Bonds were steady.

The market closed heavy. Steel touched its lowest and there also was active selling of recently strong industries.

entire line of fortifications at Tchatalja, according to dispatches from Constantinople. The Bulgarians are continuing their efforts to break through the Turkish lines, but have hitherto been prevented from doing so by the fire of the Turkish warships.

TURKEY SENDS REPLY.

Rejection of Armistice Conditions Communicated to Allies.

Constantinople, Nov. 22.—The rejection by Turkey of the conditions offered for an armistice between the opposing armies has been communicated to the Bulgarian government. One of the causes for their rejection was the opinion held in official circles in Constantinople that the conditions proposed by the allies deprived the Turks of the possibility of resuming hostilities in the event of the plenipotentiaries failing to settle terms. This, from the Turkish point of view, meant no armistice at all. Such conditions, it is held here, are only made when it is a question of the preliminaries of peace, and by accepting such terms as those presented by the allies Turkey would be tying herself hand and foot. It is further insisted that Turkey has not sunk to that degree of impotency which would compel her to accept such conditions.

The terms stipulated by the allied Balkan nations provided for the surrender of Adrianople with its garrison, for the evacuation of the Tchatalja lines in front of Constantinople and for the surrender of Scutari and Diebra. No mention is made of Constantinople or the Dardanelles.

The Turkish cruiser Hamidien arrived here this morning in tow. The warship was down by the stern, where she apparently had been struck by a torpedo. She was immediately docked.

CASES GO OVER UNTIL TUESDAY

Gill and Kidd Held Under Bonds of $500 in City Court.

OTHER CONTINUANCES

J. W. Gill and Clarence Kidd, arraigned in the city court this morning on charges in which two young girls figure, had their cases continued until next Tuesday morning, and are held under $500 bonds each.

Wm. Hosack, charged with neglecting his children, had his case continued must furnish a bond of $200 for his appearance at that time. If the bond is furnished the case will be continued until next Wednesday morning, but indefinitely, but if this bond is not put up Hosack will be bound over to the Allen county circuit court.

Ernest Wainer, charged with public intoxication, drew a continuance until Nov. 29, and is held under a bond of $200. The police think that Wainer is the man who represented himself to Pennsylvania and Wabash railroad employes as being a partner of Dr. C. F. Kaadt, and obtained sums of money. He went to jail.

August E. Shumaker, charged with indecent exposure, had his case continued until Nov. 29, and is held under bond of $500.

Tom Brady and Pat Raidy each drew $1 and costs for public intoxication. Homer Hudson, a vag, got $5 and costs.

Asa W. Grosvenor, charged with riding a motorcycle on the sidewalk, was fined $1 and costs.

SEVENTY-FIVE TO CROSS THE SANDS

Pilgrims Pay Tribute to the Shrine of Mizpah Temple.

BANQUET TO FOLLOW

With more than fifty-five petitions for membership received during the morning, it is believed that there will be at least seventy-five pilgrims in the caravan which moves at 4 o'clock this afternoon across the hot sands at the annual fall ceremonial session of Mizpah temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, in progress at the Scottish Rite cathedral.

Nobles from all parts of northern Indiana are present for the ceremonial, and included in the class of candidates are many from the nearby surrounding towns. A business session was held this morning, and the initiatory work begins with the pilgrimage late this afternoon.

At the close of the ceremonies this afternoon, the session will adjourn until 8 o'clock, at which time the usual traditional banquet will be enjoyed in the dining hall of the cathedral. E. H. Merritt, illustrious potentate, will preside as toastmaster, and an interesting program of addresses will be rendered.

The closing feature of the session will be the vaudeville following the banquet. The program not only includes a number of the best acts from the Temple bill, but a number of "stunts" by the Arab patrol and Nomad band, of Mizpah temple. During the entertainment a one-act playlet, written especially for the occasion by Captain E. H. Kilbourne will be staged by members of the patrol.

After wearing a "Vassar" union suit, you will be satisfied with no other. $1.00 to $6.00 a suit.

SUMMONED BY GRAND JURY.

Called to Substantiate Charge of Coal Trust at South Bend.

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 22.—Following charges made by representatives of the Harman Coal company, of Chicago, that local retail dealers are combined for the purpose of maintaining high prices, A. E. Kerr and E. C. Nichols have been summoned to appear before the St. Joseph county grand jury and substantiate their statements. Several dealers have announced their willingness to take the stand, if necessary, to disprove the charge.

All assert that the existence of the so-called "trust" is absolutely unknown to them, and has been invented by Kerr and Nichols, who are seeking to undersell the South Bend fuel men through the establishment of a club, whose entrance fee is $10. The coal war has created considerable excitement in the city.

Sweater coats, with shawl collars, pure wool, in heavy weaves, navy, red, grey and white, $5.00 to $6.50.

This city is the home of the new plan for municipal government under the business form, and the city has more civic improvement organizations than any other city in the middle west of the same size."

OLD FAKE BOBS UP AGAIN.

Prisoner in Russia Wants to Give South Bend Man Fortune.

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 22.—An opportunity to become the possessor of a fortune was presented to Thomas Pope here today when he received a letter from Madrid, Spain, informing him how he might become the possessor of $160,000.

The communication is indirectly from Alexis Ivanovitch, now held in a Russian prison, who, according to a clipping from a London paper also contained in the letter, is a St. Petersburg banker who embezzled 50,000 rubles, fled to Madrid, Spain, where he shot a pursuer, and was finally captured in London. By an international agreement he was returned to Russia for trial.

Pope is to cable a Spaniard at Madrid the one word "waiting," and start at once for the Spanish capital. The Spaniard, who is a friend of Ivanovitch, will explain the steps necessary for the recovery of $480,000, a third of which is to go to Pope and the remainder to the little daughter of Ivanovitch.

Pope, who is an Englishman, and is now employed at a hospital here, became suspicious of the matter and has turned the letter over to the police. Investigation may follow.

"I am a lieutenant in the German army," Wisoloski told the police, "and reached Chicago yesterday for a visit. I received word last night that my brother had died in prison, where he was sentenced for spitting in the kaiser's face. I wanted to die when I learned of his death."

Wisoloski is expected to recover.

PUBLIC HAS WRONG IDEA.

Fort Wayne Man Describes Purpose of Civil Service Association.

The public has a wrong idea of the results the civil service employes hope to attain through the organization of the Civil Service association," said one of the Fort Wayne men interested in the movement. "It is not proposed to pension superannuated civil service employes as are pensioned the war veterans, but rather, through the aid of the government, to create a fund for caring for old men and women in the civil service department who are incapacitated by the infirmities of age. It is proposed to have the government retain a part of the salaries of the employes to be used in maintaining the superannuated and it may never be necessary for the government to contribute to the fund. I believe that the people will not oppose the proposition when they understand it," continued the speaker. A meeting of all civil service employes in the city will be held in the United States court room, in the postoffice building, next Wednesday to push the organization along. A meeting was held some time ago, but it did not result in anything definite.

Vera, the "Kissless Bride," Had a Hunch Her Heart Would Warm Up and Vibrate, But Frank Found Their Honeymoon a Frost.

MRS. SEVERINA DI GIOVANNI SAMARELLI.

New York, Nov. 21.—"A cold, marble and passionless bride" is what Dr. Gaetano Samarelli calls his wife, after a chilly honeymoon of 16 days. They have separated and the bride has brought suit for divorce, alleging desertion, cruelty and defamation of character.

"I would never live with him again under any circumstances," says Mrs. Samarelli. "He has killed my love for him." Dr. Samarelli replies that she was a conjugal iceberg and wouldn't kiss him during the honeymoon.

It was not always thus. Here is a letter that Mrs. Samarelli wrote to the doctor, whom she called "Frank," before they were married:

"March 2, 1911 (6:30 a. m.)

Frank: I wish I could begin this letter with words more expressive. I wish I could express the feeling that binds me to thee in one exclamation. The delicate perfume of thy soul! It reaches me through thy letters. What a happiness thy writing brings to me.

"Frank, hast thou noticed the sudden changes that are happening in me and that I succeed with difficulty in hiding them? They are the reaction for all that I feel and which it is necessary to repress, suffocating them in cold and empty words.

"For long years I have lived inclosed within myself, taking the habit of being indifferent toward everything and everybody. This long and slow process of dissimulation has transformed my character, giving it a brand of coldness. But now—I do not know if I make myself clear—the ice begins to melt through the warm air of spring.

"My very dear Frank, I intrust my existence to thee; do thou recall it to real life. Cause it to vibrate, warm it up with the heat of thy love; something besides I expect from thee.

"Frank, love me, as I do feel I love.

"It is not true that thou wilt love me better, more ardently, more passionately.

"THY VERA."

PAY DOCTORS TO KEEP IN HEALTH

Federal Officer Says Chinese System is Good One.

BENEFITS OF PLAN

Washington, Nov. 22.—"We need more doctors of public health than mere doctors of medicine," says Dr. F. B. Dresslar, formerly of Indiana, now connected with the federal bureau of education, in a bulletin. "The Duty of the State in Medical Inspection of schools," just issued by the bureau of education. Dr. Dresslar pleads earnestly for the kind of medical inspection that seeks to promote health rather than that which hunts for ill-health. "Our system of paying doctors to do something for us when we are sick ought to be largely discarded for the Chinese system of paying them to keep us from getting sick."

Educational Agent.

Dr. Dresslar justifies the state's intervention in the health of its citizens on broad grounds of public policy. He feels that the community has as much right to demand good health in its children as it has to demand that they attend school; as much right to preserve the community against the contagion of disease and bodily neglect as against the contagion of ignorance.

In answer to the question whether medical inspection as now organized has proved useful, Dr. Dresslar shows that medical inspection has called attention in a startling way to the danger of school conditions in transmitting disease; it has already lessened actual illness, and consequently secured better school attendance; and best of all, medical inspection in the hands of carefully trained men with the right spirit has proved to be an educational agent of great value, by stimulating parents to give more attention to food, clothing, sleeping rooms and general home sanitation, and by disseminating better ideals of hygienic living.

Duty Is to Remove Cause.

It is in this increased knowledge by the people concerning the personal care of health that Dr. Dresslar finds the greatest ultimate good of medical inspection. He says many people are still in gross ignorance and superstition regarding health and disease, since many of them attribute to a divine Providence death from diseases directly due to filth. "Our chief duty lies in removing the causes which contribute to physical unsoundness and disease. As long as we herd our children in schools where they must breathe impure air, bend over insanitary school desks, work at books when they need physical exercise, just so long shall we be paying for our own errors.

Doctors of Health.

Dr. Dresslar concludes that the country needs health officers whose chief delight is in finding and developing beautiful cases of physical perfection rather than in finding some obscure and rare disease: health officers whose philosophy is based on the gospel of physical vigor, on the sanctity of personal purity and the godliness of clean living; "doctors of health" in very truth, who will be concerned with exhibiting, not a long list of the physical defective and diseased, but a large list of healthy, well developed children.

Health Officer at Hartford City Fears Diphtheria Epidemic.

Hartford City, Ind., Nov. 22.—In the last two days fifty-four pupils from two school buildings have been sent home to await an examination of their throats. There are many cases of diphtheria in the city and surrounding country, and Health Officer Dr. T. C. Dodds has ordered local picture shows and theaters to refuse admittance to children. The health officer will close the theaters and schools unless there is a decrease in the number of cases reported. Prosecution of persons who attended the funeral of a child of Wheeler McKenna, in disregard of a quarantine placed upon the home, was decided upon last evening by the health officer.

TO RETIRE FROM JEWELRY TRADE

Mr. Green to Engage in the Manufacture of Optical Goods.

TO AUCTION STOCK

After twenty years of success in the retail jewelry business in Fort Wayne, Dallas Green is preparing to retire, to engage in the manufacture of optical goods. The entire stock in his store will be sold at auction, beginning next Saturday.

Announcement of Mr. Green's retirement from the retail field in the city comes as a great surprise to his business friends and associates. Mr. Green opened his store in Fort Wayne twenty years ago and for more than seventeen years was located in the Arcade, on West Berry street. When the Shoaff building was completed he moved his stock into the present handsome quarters. The store is today one of the largest in Indiana and is the largest owned by one individual.

The sale of the stock wil begin Saturday afternoon and will continue until sold out. Mr. Green has not selected quarters for his manufacturing plant at this time. He holds an unexpired lease on his present quarters.

In Manufacturing Field.

Mr. Green recently invented and patented four articles used by wearers of eyeglasses. Some time ago he started manufacturing them, and as the demand increased, he engaged more extensively in the business, opening a workshop in the basement. He now has a force of workmen engaged and is daily increasing the output of his stock. The business has assumed such proportions that his entire time is demanded in attending to it.

One of the principal and most popular of Mr. Green's inventions is an automatic contrivance for holding eyeglasses when not in use. It is a small metal case containing a chain to which the glasses are fastened. The case is pinned to a coat lapel or dress and when the wearer desires to use his glasses, the chain to which the lenses are secured may be pulled out to any desired length. Devices of similar nature have been on the market for some time, but Mr. Green's is smaller, more artistic and has many new features of improvement.

FOR 37 YEARS WAS NIGHT WATCHMAN

Chicago May Says Vacations Never Did Him Any Good.

IS 68 YEARS OF AGE

Chicago, Nov. 22.—"Making rounds" as a nightwatchman for thirty-seven years; approximately 13,505 nights, minus about thirty taken out for sickness and various other causes; averaged ten rounds a night, or 135,050; "punched 300 clocks each night, or a total of 40,515,000.

This is the unique and interesting record in figures furnished by John Henne, now nightwatchman for Sears, Roebuck & Co.

Formerly with the Pullman company, Henne has been with Sears(Roebuck & Co. for the last twelve years, but in that twelve years he has not missed a night's work. Vacations are a burden to him, which also is a unique feature of his career.

Doesn't Like Vacations.

"Vacations do me more harm than good," he says. "I took two weeks once, and when it was over I hated to go back to work. I find I am better satisfied to keep at it 'night in and night out' in my case than to be taking annual layoffs. If I get real tired, then I skip a night or two, but no more."

According to Henne's own mathematical deductions, he has averaged about five miles each night that he has served as watchman, which gives him a record of 675,250 miles as a pedestrian. At 2 cents a mile as a common carrier he would have made $13,505.

Henne is 68 years of age, and he has enjoyed every one of them, even though he has spent about 3,650 hours each year during the last thirty-seven years looking for fire and burglars.

Regular eating hours is his solution to the long and happy career. As long as he has been working as nightwatchman he has not varied twenty minutes in his eating schedule.

"You can see that I'm a pretty healthy looking fellow," says Henne, "and I know to a certainty that regular hours have done more for me than anything else. I wouldn't say that watching is hard work, but its tedious. It has an advantage in that it gives a man a chance to live up to a schedule in eating and sleeping that keeps him in good shape. That's all I could advise a young man—don't follow irregular hours. The work a man does is either too hard or it isn't. There are always enough different kinds of work so that no one need do something that injures his health. Whatever line of business he is in is only incidental to the fact that he must treat himself right.

"I'm a good deal of a machine, you might say, but I'm so used to it now that I'm afraid I'd get sick if I were taken off the job," says Henne.

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS

A Few Applications of a Simple Remedy Will Bring Back the Natural Color.

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place" is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that Nature needs assistance. It is Nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good, reliable hair-restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandparents used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of domestic sage and sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur at once and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

ACROSS SIBERIA TO ASSIST CUPID

This Woman Accompanied Her Ward from Paris to Shanghai.

MARRIES AN OFFICER

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 22.—A trip across Siberia was described by Mrs. J. Clarence Lee, wife of the pastor of the Church of the Restoration, Seventeenth and Master streets, who, accompanied by her ward, Miss Wilhelmina Gibbons, traveled from the Russian frontier to Shanghai, China.

Mrs. Lee, when seen at her home, 1919 North Gratz street, declared that the journey was marked by interesting experiences.

"The reason for the trip was a rather romantic one," said Mrs. Lee. "My ward was engaged to a naval officer stationed at Shanghai. They were to have been married last fall, but when trouble broke out in China, the American admiral refused all leave of absence. Consequently it was either a case of waiting a year or two or of Miss Gibbons going to China to be married. As it was manifestly impossible for her to go alone, I left France, where I had been staying with my family at a chateau, and set out for Paris, September 4 last.

"We traveled by way of Warsaw and Moscow on the Transsiberian railway from Kharbine to Dalny, and from there by steamer to Shanghai. Cholera was raging there when we arrived, and hundreds of the Chinese were dying every day, but the foreign residents were not affected by the disease at all.

"When we crossed the border line into Russia, we were stopped at Alexandrova, the frontier city, in the middle of the night, and along with hundreds of dirty, picturesque Russian peasants we were locked in the station until our baggage had been examined and our passports approved. The consul was with us, so we had no trouble, but we had to stand the foul, reeking smell of the peasants, who were terror stricken when their passports were examined for fear they would never get them back. As in most cases they had no money to buy new passports, they had grounds for their distress."

Speaking of the conditions of the Russian peasants, Mrs. Lee declared that there was a great unrestful seething which would break out in open rebellion. "The Russian peasants are like brutes, and are treated as such by the over-officered government," she said.

Telling of conditions in China, Mrs. Lee said that in general the power was held by the young men of the country.

"Since a republic has been declared the people expect miracles," she said, "and are impatient because they have not received all they want immediately. The women are beginning to wake up, but they do not count yet. They are considered as mere chattels, and even when they have enjoyed the advantages of a foreign education, in the mind of the Chinese men their status does not change."

MAY YET WIN CALIFORNIA.

Wilson Elector Likely to Have Lead Over Roosevelt Man.

San Francisco, Nov. 22.—With the canvass of 34 out of 58 counties in the state completed, Roosevelt maintains a margin over Wilson of 65 votes. This is on the face of unofficial returns from the counties not canvassed.

Prospective changes not yet officially recorded, however, indicate that Griffin, heading the Wilson electoral ticket, will have a plurality over Wallace, high Roosevelt elector in the final computation.

It is estimated that more than a half million dollars in election bets is tied up awaiting the end of the official count.

The "Darling" and the "Angel" of the Stockyards and a Fighter, Too, is Miss Mary.

MISS MARY M'DOWELL.

Chicago university has two settlements, one in the aristocratic region near the university and the other a few hundred feet from a square mile of slaughter houses—the Chicago stockyards.

"One was located among the 'swells' and the other in the 'smells,'" explained Miss Mary McDowell, the plump, jolly, blue-eyed Scotchwoman who is the darling of Packingtown.

However, Chicago people are more apt to refer to Miss McDowell as "the stockyards angel." And in the stockyards district, to thousands of Polish and Lithuanian workers and their families "Mees" McDowell is an angel. As the head of the settlement she hears all of the troubles, heartaches and misery and, once in a while, laughter of many foreigners herded together in squalid tenements. A Slavic mother with her little children clinging frightened to her skirts pitifully weeps out the story of a drunken brute of a husband. That is Miss McDowell's clew for action. There has never been a human brute to whom she was afraid to talk and talk with forceful plainness.

Or it may be a girl worker in the packinghouse with some cause for complaint, and Mary McDowell marches up to the big stockyards superintendent and "gives him a piece of her mind" just as fearlessly.

She organized the first woman's trade union ever attempted in the stockyards and insisted upon better working conditions for the girls and women, and she attends the meetings of the men's union, too.

She opened her settlement in a small storeroom 14 years ago. Soon she expanded to three rooms over a feed store. Now she is at the head of a $50,000 institution, libraries, assembly halls, music rooms, gymnasium and school rooms, physicians, nurses and teachers.

Chicago used to dump garbage in holes in the pavements in the stockyards district. The street commissioner said that garbage made fine pavements after it had been down a year or so, but in the meantime the odor made the stockyards smell like a perfume factory. One bright morning Miss McDowell appeared at the mayor's office. Bringing up the rear was a troop of foreign women. Through Miss McDowell they kicked about the garbage. The mayor patiently explained what fine pavements garbage made.

"All right, we want the rest of it dumped on Lake Shore drive. If it's good for the stockyards it's good for the drive, too," said Miss McDowell. Very fashionable folks dwell on that drive, you know, and so garbage was not used for paving purposes there, and —after that talk—it was not used in Packingtown any more, either.

Once in a while Miss McDowell skips to another city and talks to crowds of working girls. Her favorite address is "The Helpless in Industry." It is worth any person's time to hear it.

Miss McDowell is about fifty. Her only recreation is trimming hats. She really enjoys it. "If the working girls and the workingmen's wives and children didn't need me," she explains, "I would spend all my time trimming the prettiest and most expensive hats ever seen."

OPPOSE FREEING OF PHILIPPINES

Jurist Declares Natives Not Ready for Self Government.

WAS ONCE A SOLDIER

Houston, Texas, Nov. 21.—"To free the Philippines or dispose of them to the Japanese as has been recently suggested as an alternative would be a great mistake on the part of the United States," declared Judge Anza B. Kelly, of Tacloban, Leyte, P. I., Judge Kelly, who has been in the islands thirteen years, is stopping in Houston.

"Nor is the statement that they have been a heavy expense to this government true. At no time within five years has this government been called upon to defray a penny of the expense of their administration, so far as it relates to their own affairs. The only expense borne by the United States is connected with the maintenance there of its military department with headquarters at Manilla."

Judge Kelly first went to the islands as a lieutenant of the Thirty-eighth infantry, U. S. A., but later resigned his commission to practise law. He returned to the United States several months ago as chairman of the Philippine democratic delegation to the Baltimore convention and watched the campaigns of the three parties with interest. He is one of the few men on the islands thoroughly conversant with both the military and civil problems which it has been called upon to solve and his opinion carries weight both in his far Asiatic home and in the states.

"The natives are altogether incapable of self-government," he said. "In the first place they are unprepared for a republican form of government, as they have always been ruled over by kings and could not yet grasp the change. The people all speak different languages, according to the provinces in which they live. To overcome this the English language is being taught to all classes. They are eager to learn the American ways, and I think that within a very few years the islands will be thoroughly civilized.

The two parties are now urging that the people be set free at some near date. This would be a mistake similar to that made by the United States in freeing Cuba before she was thoroughly prepared for such a movement. As for selling the islands or giving them to Japan, it would be the height of folly, as there are at present more than 8,000,000 Christians who would necessarily be absorbed by that nation. This would be in direct violation of the policies advocated by the American government.

"The opinion prevailing in the civilized world that the Filipinos are similar to the specimens exhibited by the curio gatherers is also without foundation. While it is true such are found in certain provinces of the islands, they can in no way give an idea of the true character of the people. According to the statistics in the department at Washington, more than one-half of the lawyers of the province are natives, while the same is true of the judges, governors and the greater number of the public officials."

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. Husband Considered Spouse Unfit for Housekeeping.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 21.—James F. Riley liked his sister better than his wife and insisted on the former acting as housekeeper, according to Mrs. Fern L. Riley's testimony in Judge Codd's So she left, and Mr. Riley would not allow her to return home unless she would apologize to his sister. Now she asks a divorce.

"He told me his sister, Georgia Lawton, could can fruit better than I, and had better taste," Mrs. Riley testified. "I got tired of that kind of talk and refused to live with him any longer unless he would drive Georgia from the house. We have a 6-months-old child now, but he has never seen it."

Simplicity in Furniture

SIMPLE lines, rather than elaboration, massiveness in place of stilted elegance---these are characteristics of modern home furniture. Our immense furniture store is largely devoted to just such pieces, in the mission and Flanders styles, with early English or fumed finish. No type of furniture surpasses these in simple elegance and suggesstiveness of "solid comfort." They are particularly adapted to the modern bungalow rooms, the den, and the large living room with its built-in chimney seats and bookcases.

The Colonial is another type, reflecting the simple life of our forefathers. It is conspicuous in our fall displays, particularly in solid mahogany bedroom and dining-room suites. Its dull finish, wood trimmings and quaint elegance are pleasingly suggestive of other days.

Striking examples of the Colonial period furniture are the bedroom suites of Circassian walnut. This wood shows up the grain better than any other, and makes a very beautiful, rich appearance.

STEFANSSON TO SEEK A NEW LAND

"Blond Eskimo" Discoverer is Arranging Another Expedition

TO FIND CONTINENT

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—Vilhjmar Stefansson, of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, who recently returned from a five years' stay within the Arctic circle, during which he discovered the "blond Eskimo," announced that he will lead another expedition into that region next May. Mr. Stefansson then will devote his energies to looking for a continent as big as Australia, which Gen. A. W. Greeley, the noted Arctic explorer, and officials of the coast and geodetic survey believe lies to the north of Alaska.

If Mr. Stefansson discovers such a land it will be a new and remarkable illustration of the greatness of the human mind. The method by which scientists have reached the conclusion of its existence is simple. The tide in the Arctic ocean comes from the Atlantic ocean, owing to the narrowness and shallowness of Behring strait. It should flow directly across the north pole and strike the northern coast of Alaska at right angles from the north. But it does not. The tide flows from the westward along the northern coast of Alaska. The only explanation of this phenomena ever offered is that an immense body of land lies between Alaska and the pole and that the tide flows around this land over the top of the world.

It is thought by Mr. Stefanssen that perhaps the land which Mr. Peary thought he saw on the westward as he made his way northward is a part of this undiscovered continent

Mr. Stefansson is in Washington, where he will deliver a lecture before the National Geographical society. The society is deeply interested in his new venture and regards it of the greatest importance. Mr. Stefansson will leave from either San Francisco or Seattle and expects to be gone several years. He will be accompanied by five or six scientists. The expedition has received the scientific support of the American Museum of Natural History, and it is expected other scientific bodies, such as the National Geographical society, also will vote their suport. Funds will come from private sources.

The expedition will proceed from the Pacific coast up around Bering strait, and will have its main base of operations on Cape Bathhurst. Two secondary bases will be established. One will be in Victoria Land, for the purpose of a close study of the "blond Eskimos" discovered by Mr. Stefansson, who are believed by some to be descendants of Scandinavians who disappeared from Greenland in 1412.

The second base will be established on the northwest corner of Banks island, and this party will devote its energies to the supposed continent in the Arctic.

An auxilliary schooner will play between these bases, and by means of the schooner the expedition expects to keep in yearly contact with the outside world.

Mr. Stefansson, who was born in Manitoba and is but thirty-three years old, was brought up in North Dakota, and is a graduate of the Iowa state university.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says: "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other. For croup there is nothing that excels it." For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

DOCTORS CALLED BLUFFERS.

Physician Declares Conscience Drives Him From Profession.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 22.—Because he "hates to take the money" for worthless services, Dr. Lee B. Woodcock, a young society man and physician, whose practice has been among Scranton's wealthiest residents, has given up the practice of his profession. Dr. Woodcock said his practice had been remunerative enough, but hinted that his conscience troubled him.

"I've come to feel that the greatest part of practical medicine is worthless. Many times doctors treat cases where they know they can do no good. In such positions I have felt that, far from doing humanity a benefit, I was working a harm."

Dr. Woodcock recently has embraced socialism. He will open a studio for voice culture.

RAN AWAY FROM HIS KINGDOM BECAUSE NATIVES INSISTED THAT HE TURN BIGAMIST.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 23.—When the natives of the island of Savaii, one of the South Sea group, owned by Germany, crowned Frederick B. Hyde and his wife king and queen, they didn't object, but when to celebrate the event they insisted upon presenting Hyde with 16 pigs, 147 chickens, and 16 fish, together with another wife, it required the combined diplomacy of the American consul and Hyde to prevent complications in the new royal household. According to Hyde, his wife doesn't know yet that a dusky maiden was turned over to him as his second wife and that so far as the natives are concerned he is her husband.

"When Mrs. Hyde and I sailed from San Francisco a few months ago on the Steamer Tahiti, we never expected to have an adventure of this kind," said Hyde. "Although the trip was taken only for pleasure, Secy. of Agriculture Wilson asked me to make a few investigations for the department.

"After covering most of the South Sea islands, we arrived at Apia, where we met Mason Mitchell, the American consul, who introduced us to Princess Faamu and her husband, who is the high chief of Apia. The princess is the daughter of the late King Malietoa, the last monarch of the group before the islands were taken over by Germany.

"When I expressed a desire to study the natives who still lived in a more primitive state, the princess arranged for a trip to Savaii.

"We were delighted with the people and their costumes at Matautu, the largest town on the island of Savaii. It seems that the natives were so well pleased with us that the old chiefs came to me and proposed that I become their 'Tuefete.'

"Thinking the matter some sort of a joke, I consented, and, the next day, at a great gathering of the natives, we went through the strange ceremonies, never before experienced on the island by a white man and woman. Chiefs and 'talking men' to the number of 100, clad in the very scant garb of the islands, officiated. And then a big feast was served.

"The next day the natives came to me and presented their offerings to the new king. These gifts included 16 pigs, 147 chickens and 17 fish, the new king and queen were capable of consuming the entire lot.

"A few days later some of the 'talking men" came to me and hinted that 'His Majesty' had as yet done nothing in the manner of the selection of another wife. They told me that the most beautiful 'Taupou' of the island was in readiness for the ceremony and that the people would think it strange if the wedding did not occur soon.

"I told them I was not so particular. So one of the old men asked me what I thought of the Taupou, who was standing nearby. She was a pretty young woman, and I said she would please me quite well.

"'Take her then,' said the 'talking man.'

"The young woman smiled at me, and from that moment it was understood that she was my wife, and she was honored as such by all the natives."

Hyde said that Mrs. Hyde knew nothing of this matter of an extra wife, and, as far as he was concerned, he had not even spoken to the new bride. But, according to the customs of the Samoans, he understood the "Taupou" really was his second wife.

Hyde has arranged to purchase a new schooner for his subjects, which will be used to collect copra. The natives expect their king to return to them in six months, but Hyde is not certain that he will go back so long as that second wife sticks around.

HOME-MADE MENTHO-LAXENE

The Cold, Catarrh and Cough Remedy That Is Imitated, But Never Equalled in Cheapness and Genuine Curative Qualities.

Obtain the Pure Essence Mentho-Laxene at Drug Store and Mix With Granulated Sugar and Water, Making a Full Pint.

Usually a family spends two to five dollars every winter for cough, cold, and catarrh remedies, buying 25c worth at a time.

For instance, a two-ounce bottle, at 25c, will contain about four-fifths "syrup" and one-fifth "medicine." That's paying too much for ordinary syrup; you can make a half gallon of syrup for 25c.

The syrup, extra bottles, labels, corks, cartons, etc., make this method of buying very expensive by the end of the year.

A little thought and wisdom will save any family several dollars and give them purer and better medicine, too.

Make a simple syrup with a pint of granulated sugar and a half pint of boiling water; then buy the pure concentrated essence of Mentho-Laxene at your drugstore (2½ oz. bottle) and empty it into a pint bottle or jar and then fill it up with the syrup.

Now you have a season's supply of the purest, best and most promptly effective cold and catarrh cure and cough medicine that it is possible to obtain. It keeps indefinitely, and cures young and old of colds, catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, hoarseness, shortness of breath and all lung and bronchial trouble. It is the only remedy that cures coughs and drives catarrhal matter out of the system, by its tonic-laxative action. It improves the appetite, reduces fever and strengthens the system, thus avoiding chronic ailments and consumption.

Directions with each bottle of Essence Mentho-Laxene tell how to make and how to take. The manufacturers also guarantee to refund money to any one not pleased by its thorough effectiveness.—"The above product is Manufactured by The Blacburn Products Co., Dayton, Ohio. This aplies to Mentho-Laxene.

DEATH EXPOSES SMUGGLING PLOT

Life Was Sacrificed, It is Said, to Land Opium.

LAW TAKES A HAND

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 23.—The secrets of opium smugglers—how a life was lost in Manila bay—were revealed to John L. McNab, United States attorney, and W. H. Tidwell, special agent of the treasury department, in a dramatic narrative.

For nearly a year the "ring" that used the Pacific Mail steamship Manchuria has been engaged in a highly profitable opium trade, and the facts might not have been brought to light had it not been for the peculiar circumstances surrounding the death of Fourth Officer Edward Morse, whose body was found floating beside the vessel in Manila bay on the last outbound voyage.

A conspirator, in his terror, told the whole story to the Manchuria's chief steward, who in turn repeated it to John P. Bourne, the purser.

Told by a Deck Boy.

Bourne, who had the story indirectly from J. S. Svogar, main deck watchman, told it to the investigators here, and M. R. Zuvic, the third officer, to whom the tale had been related by a frightened Chinese deck boy, corroborated the account.

The Manchuria on her last trip to San Francisco brought many thousands of dollars' worth of opium from the orient, but there was no opportunity to land any considerable quantity of it. The men who had embarked in the dangerous venture decided to dispose of it in Honolulu, but there they were thwarted again, and most of it was still on board when the vessel turned its prow westward from Honolulu.

Manila offered the only remaining chance for a quick sale and the traffickers decided to unload it there.

An ingenious scheme had been devised to evade the customs inspectors, involving an enormous risk. The first night two of the smugglers went ashore after being searched and under cover of darkness one swam from the vessel to the breakwater, a distance of 125 yards, carrying a line to which was attached a heavier line made fast on the vessel At a signal from shore, the conspirators who remained behind lowered into the water a bundle of opium tins tied to a life preserver, which was then pulled to shore.

The swimmer had difficulty in reaching the breakwater and when it was arranged to take the next consignment ashore Fourth Officer Morse was chosen to make the swim. Two others went ashore and were waiting in an automobile a short distance from the point where Morse was expected to land. Morse hitched the rope around his body and struck out for the shore.

No Signal.

Two hours passed and no signal came to the waiting men. Those who remained on board the vessel began to haul in the rope and presently a dark, dripping object appeared in the dim light of the cargo port. It was Morse's body, already lifeless and cold. Panic stricken and without lights, they tied weights to the body and dropped it again into the bay. No opium went ashore that night, and the men in the automobile waited until nearly dawn.

The next day a lookout discovered the body floating alongside, the line still tied around the trunk under the right shoulder. Bourne said he went below and told Second Officer Riehl. After a moment Riehl asked:

"Say, Bourne, is he swimming?"

Bourne replied that the body was lifeless.

Second Officer Riehl, Fifth Officer Locke and Watchman Svogar were questioned by Attorney McNab, and all denied that they knew anything of the death of Morse.

Instructions were cabled to Manila to have the bay dragged for the anchor and ropes that were used in the effort to conceal Morse's body. The vessel at the time of the drowning was lying in three fathoms of water.

START PLAN FOR UNIFORM DRESS

Says All Would Be Helped if a Certain Costume Were Worn.

CLUB MEMBERS HEAR

Denver, Col., Nov. 22.—Members of Deiver's woman clubs have taken up the subject of the extreme styles worn by the women of today and are considering means of reform.

Increasing comment on the part of the clergy and the press and the alleged crime wave that has caused so much argument pro and con on the dress question, has aroused the women of the city to a need of a serious consideration of the affair and the suggestion of a practical method of reform, if one is deemed necessary.

In accordance with this belief the home and education committee of the Woman's club of Denver will appoint a sub-committee to take up the matter and discuss proposed reforms with a view of placing them before the members of the club.

One of the proposed improvements of women's attire that will be considered is the adoption of a uniform street costume, very simple and within the reach of every woman's pocketbook, which will do away with the heartburnings entailed in the mad strife to be first in the pursuit of fashion and will eliminate considerable of the expense.

Cost Main Objection.

The deciding point from which this movement came was a recent address given by Mrs. W. D. Wright before the Colorado Society of the Daughters of the Confederacy. While Mrs. Wright's remarks were humorous, there was an undercurrent of serious accusation against the prevailing styles and an earnest appeal for the betterment of fashions from a moral point of view.

It is not, however, that the clinging gowns and tight skirts are in themselves the most objectionable feature, according to Mrs. Wright. The great trouble is the increasing costliness of women's apparel and the fact that the women of today are engaged in a wild struggle as to how much greater an extreme each one can go than her neighbor.

Do away with the contention among women to outdo each other in the matter of dress and you will have the cure of the whole fashion evil, in Mrs. Wright's estimation.

Urges Moderation.

"The clinging gown in itself is not suggestive," said Mrs. Wright, "except when carried to an extreme. Used moderately, just enough to reveal the curves of the figure, it is beautiful and graceful. I believe in the short skirt, too, to a certain extent, for it is far more healthful, sensible and convenient than the old long style.

"It is the woman herself who makes the style, however—not the other way around. A fashion may be very objectionable on one type of woman and yet another may carry it off in perfectly dignified style.

"For this reason I am urging women to think for themselves in this matter of dress, not to be mere slaves of the prevailing mode, but to select their own styles, suitable to both their person and their pocketbook.

"The only way, to my mind, of freeing our sex from its self-inwoven toils is the adoption of this universal costume for street and house wear. That would eliminate rivalry, dissatisfaction and the increasing tendency toward great expense."

"What do you think a costume of this sort ought to be like?" Mrs. Wright was asked.

"My ideal costume is very simple and plain, no frills, with a clinging skirt, but not too clinging, and just short enough to be convenient."

"And do you really think women could be induced to accept a common uniform?" was asked.

"Well, the way to do that would be to make it the style, and then every woman would wear one. Sort of capitalizing woman's vanity, to to speak."

Less Clothes, Fewer Mashers.

In all parts of the country the war against the prevailing immodesty in women's dress is assuming huger proportions Ministers especially are repeating their denunciations of the narrow skirt and low neck and new and novel arguments are being constantly sought on both sides of the discussion.

Now comes some learned person who has dug up old Bible precedents to prove that the women of Judea, way back in the days of the prophet Isaiah, incurred the wrath of that seer on account of their extreme and indecent modes of dressing, so it seems apparent that the old game was going on way back a thousand years or so B. C., and that men have been objecting to feminine fashions and accusing them of being designed with the aim of luring poor male creatures to their downfall practically ever since the beginning of history.

The same student of ancient history quoted above advances the idea that we need less clothes instead of more to make for greater modesty, and brings up the example of Sparta, where the comparative absence of clothes marked an almost "masher free" era, to prove his claims.

Hydroplane flights to sea and back are being arranged in France for next year.

ALWAYS CONQUERS RHEUMATISM

Thousands of persons have been rescued from the tortures of Rheumatism and restored to perfect health by the use of S. S. S. So uniform are the good results from its use that we do not hesitate to say S. S. S. always conquers Rheumatism if given a fair trial. You can never cure this deep-seated disease with external treatment, such as liniments, plasters, blisters, etc. These may furnish temporary relief but they do not reach the blood where the real cause is located. Rheumatism is rooted and grounded in the blood and must be driven from its stronghold there before permanent relief can be had. S. S. S. conquers Rheumatism by driving from the circulation the excess accumulation of uric acid which is responsible for the disease. S. S. S. strengthens and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour fluid, causing pain and agony throughout the system, it becomes a nourishing stream furnishing health to every portion of the body and relieving every symptom of Rheumatism. If you do not conquer Rheumatism it will conquer you. S. S. S. is the one remedy you can depend upon for good effects. Book on Rheumatism and medical advice free. DECIDES AGAINST HERSELF.

Woman Lawyer Compelled to Admit Letter Was Not Evidence.

St. Louis, Nov. 22.—Mrs. Annabel Arnold, an attorney, who educated her husband as a physician, decided a law point against herself yesterday afternoon in Judge Grimm's court, in her suit for divorce from Dr. Walter E. Arnold.

She had testified that she was a lawyer and proprietor of a private school. Her attorney, Eustace Wheeler, attempted to introduce evidence in a letter written to her by her husband since the separation.

"Now, Mrs. Arnold," said Judge Grimm, "I want to ask you, as an expert on law, do you think this letter is competent evidence?"

"Well, your honor," she replied, "under a strict interpretation of the law the letter would probably be considered a privileged communication between husband and wife."

"That is the court's view," said Judge Grimm.

The leter was not read.

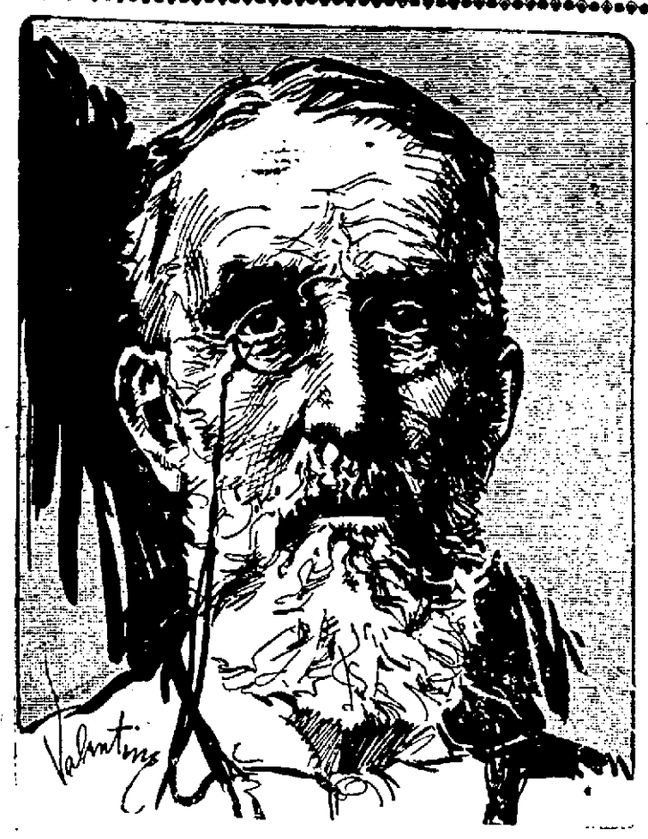
"GRAND OLD MAN" AT THE GREEN AGE OF 80 IS TAKING UP A NEW SCIENCE.



ANDREW D. WHITE.

The other day on the great campus of Cornell university 3,000 men and boys stood for an hour bareheaded in pouring rain to do honor to "the grand old man of America"—Andrew D. White, just eighty years "young."

Many were the epithets bestowed that day on this fine, white-haired citizen of America who has been, in the wide span of his years, teacher, college president, publicist, author and diplomat. But none of them described him comprehensively until one speaker arose and called him "MAN."

White's career may be said to have begun with his organizing of Cornell college way back in the early 60's. For a long time White had cherished an ideal of a new sort of college—"a place," as he put it, "where any person could find instruction in any subject." It was an innovation, for women were not to be excluded, nor were any subjects to be tabooed. The formal spirit that prevailed in eastern collegiate circles was to be altogether lacking in this history making institution on the shores of Cayuga lake.

Ezra Cornell listened to White's educational ideals and furnished the funds. The charter was granted and Cornell opened.

From the very first the ability of White was evident. About him was gathered the most brilliant army of teachers. There was the great scientist, Louis Agassiz; there was the poet, Bayard Taylor, as well as Goldwin Smith and James Russell Lowell. With such a faculty, how should the college go amiss!

How White knew the psychology of the boyish hearts with which he dealt is made clear by one of the first incidents in Cornell's history.

The college authorities were trying to suppress hazing. Two of the crack players on the football team had been suspended for violation of the anti-hazing rules. The students decided to call a "strike" to "bring the faculty members to their senses." The talk reached "Prexy" White's ears. He called a meeting of the students. This is what he said to them:

"If there are any members of the student body before me who think they are conferring a benefit upon this university by remaining instead of going away, we cannot be too quickly rid of them. The university would make more money if all its students were to go away and the funds were put out at interest."

Of course, the students all stayed—"to spite the college," as they said.

When he had the new college in excellent running order, White took up statecraft. He was apointed to many national and international committees, serving brilliantly. In 1879 he was made minister to Berlin, holding the post two years.

On President Cleveland's accession he was appointed to the important Venezuelan commission and then again given the ambassadorship to Germany. He resigned this in 1902 at the age of 70.

And now at 80 this great mind is as clear as ever and White is taking up a new study, the theory of criminology! He says he has already collected a great deal of data on the subject and in a few years—surely before he is ninety—will have some important contributions to make to this science!

HOW TO GET OUT COLOR IN EYES

Drape Yellow With Neutral to Get Blue, Says an Expert.

A LESSON IN HATS

Chicago, Nov 22—Psychology was advocated as an aid to the girl student when she visits her milliner or dressmaker, and to the man when he seeks to do shopping for his wife.

Professor Walter Dill Scott, a Northwestern university teacher of phychology, and known as supplier of material for intricate detective stories where the crimes are solved through psychological deductions, gave the co-eds information on how to make the correct selection of colors and materials for hats and gowns.

His lecture was chiefly on color combinations, and when he had ended the girls of the class gathered around him and besought him for more detailed information.

"If I drape a yellow satin with chiffon will it make my eyes appear blue?" asked Miss Edith Rittenhouse, a blond sophomore.

"It certainly will," said the professor. "You could use lace or marquisette just as well. You see, blue and yellow are complimentary colors, and if you drape yellow with a neutral color it will bring out the blue in your eyes."

Turning then to Miss Agnes Burland, the tallest girl in the school, who wore a drooping product of the milliner's art, he said:

"You have the right idea in hats. All the lines in a hat should be downward, if you wish to reduce your height in appearance. If people would only think before they buy they could clothe themselves much more attractively. Why is it that girls with vivid coloring always want to wear red and blue? It makes their faces appear purple."

ARTIST FINDS A STRANGE PEOPLE

Is Trying to Reclaim Poor, Ignorant and Low Mountaineers.

ALL ARE DEGARDED

Nyack, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Probably nowhere else in America is there such a striking contrast—in the hills semi-savages and in the valleys the homes of some of the wealthiest persons in the world—as exists in the Ramapo mountains, Rockland county.

In the valleys at their base are handsome mansions; about one thousand feet above them, as the crow flies, but much farther by the blind trails through the forests—paths that zigzag a mile to gain an elevation of 500 feet—in little clearings on bits of level land, in the hovels of logs plastered with tenacious yellow mud to keep out the cold, live some of the poorest, most ignorant and at times the most lawless persons who can be found anywhere in the United States outside of the almost inaccessible fastnesses of the Tennessee mountains.

It is announced that a concerted effort is now to be made to improve the condition of these persons by Mrs. E. H. Harriman, her daughter, Mrs. Rumsey, and other wealthy women. The widow of the financier has given $1,000 to start the work. Miss Florence Smith, a teacher from the Eugenics Bureau Training school at Cold Springs Harbor, will begin soon to train the mountaineers in hygienics and to provide them with better surroundings.

The mountaineers, who live scattered through the forests for miles around, are descendants mostly of the slaves who were owned by the Suffern family and were liberated nearly one hundred years ago. Through an ancient admixture of their blood with that of the Indians who once roamed through this still wild region, and through a later mingling with the whites, the descendants are a curious looking race. Nearly all of them have yellow skin; tawny, wavy hair, the color of a lion's pelt, and blue or yellow eyes.

A person in whose veins there is still a predominance of yellow blood rarely has a mustache or a beard, but among these men of the mountains beards and mustaches are common. In the same family it is no unusual thing to see some of the children as golden haired and blue eyed as Swedes or Norwegians, others with sharp noses and copper colored skins and others with curly black locks and skins in which there is no suggestion of diluted blood.

The cabins of these mountaineers are built of unhewn logs. The crevices between them are plastered over with the sticky yellow mud that makes the thin coating of soil on the mountainside. There is no more than a single window, and that contains only a solitary pane of glass. Set among the bare trees and snow they have an air of poverty and desolation that cannot be equalled in a much longer journey from New York.

The surroundings are in keeping. Bowlders and half rotten logs lie about in confusion. Mongrel curs note the approach of the stranger with yelps and loud barks, and a man followed by a woman and several children rush out to investigate. The furtive glances and the manner of parrying questions show their suspicious natures at once.

One peep at the squalor inside of these cabins is enough. The occupants sleep on bags and hay. There are a rude table and a few articles of furniture made by the man, for none ever leaves the mountain, unless to visit the valley and rob a henroost. In most families the man is dark, with thick lips and long hair, giving credence to his claim of Indian descent. The women seem more of the negro type, but the children have a different colored skin.

More ignorance and degradation than prevail in these mountains would be difficult to find. Very few of the grown persons can read or write and religion does not interest them. The ceremony of marriage is not necessary. A man and woman agree to live together, and when this arrangement becomes tiresome either seeks another more congenial. Three or four surnames are held by three-quarters of the community.

Artist a Missionary.

On the crest of the Houvenkopf above them dwell two persons once fairly prominent in the affairs of life outside, but who now—forgetting the world and by the world forgot—are devoting the remaining years of their lives to educating and civilizing these half savage mountaineers. They are Francis Wheaton, an artist, and his wife, a graduate of Wellesley college, where she also was one of the instructors.

For many years Mr. Wheaten and his wife had been engaged in missionary work among the poorer classes. One day, while holding services at his old home in New Jersey, a young man called him aside and expressed the wish that his mother, who was living on Mount Houvenkopf, could attend such meetings. A date was fixed for the purpose and Mr. Wheaton and the young man started for the mountains. It was a hard journey over rough roads and difficult for the missionary, who has only one leg, but at last they reached the cabin on top and sent word around that religious services would be held that afternoon.

Twenty grown persons and several children attended, and Mr. Wheaton was surprised to find that none of them could read or write. There, he thought, was a field for missionary work, so he purchased a little home on the mountain top. After a year's work he decided to confine his work to the children and erected a simple building and established a school which is now under the direction of the state board of education.

Then his trials began. The mountainters disliked the idea of white persons living among them and would not allow their children to attend the school. His wife then joined him, and together they labored and persevered until at present they have twenty-six mountain children enrolled.

Few persons can realize the great sacrifices made by the artist and his wife in dwelling among such a race. Many of the Jackson Whites when once they understood entered into the spirit of the work, but others are harassing and dangerous at all times.

HOTEL BARS BABY BUT TAKES DOGS

Man Forced Out Because of Baby is Sued for Rent.

HE WILL FIGHT SUIT

New York, Nov. 21.—The unique case of Baby against Dog will be heard in the first district court of Jersey City when the action of the Fairmount Hotel company against Clinton R. Dow is heard. The hotel company wants $300 from Mr. Dow, who is a broker in New York, on the ground that he broke his lease and moved away from the Fairmount hotel, Jersey City, four months before his year's lease expired. Mr. Dow told his story yesterday in his answer to the action.

According to Mr. Dow, he occupied a three-room apartment in the Fairmount. Discovering that there was soon to be an addition to his family, he arranged with a friend who had a larger suite across the corridor, and who was about to move, to take the rooms. When the friend moved, he says, he went to the hotel management to arrange for the transfer, but was received with something of a stony stare and the information that there was no room in the Fairmount for infants.

Mr. Dow says that all his pleas were in vain, and feeling that more room was imperative, he moved out of the hotel into larger quarters in Duncan avenue, taking with him his big Newfoundland dog Mike. He sets forth that other tenants of the Fairmount also kept dogs in the building and the management made no objection, and he fails to see why a child should be less favored in this respect than a dog. Some of the tenants of the hotel have been subpoenaed as witnesses to show that they have kept dogs there, says Mr. Dow, and that there is no objection on the part of the hotel management. The Dows, with Mike and the young heir to the name, are now living in Duncan avenue. Mr. Dow declares that he will fight to a finish the action to collect the rent for the unexpired portion of his lease on the ground that a baby is entitled to the same consideration as a dog.

CIGAR CUTTERS CONTAIN GERMS

Physicians Place Ban on the Little Instrument for Smokers.

START A CRUSADE

New York, Nov. 21.—That disease and even death lurk in the apparently harmless cigar cutter and that each man who snips his "smoke" at a public stand invites grave danger is the opinion of a dozen physicians. They agreed that the contrivance is a menace to public health and should be abandoned.

Dr. John A. Wyeth, of 244 Lexington avenue, said: "The public cigar cutter should have been shut out of every civilized country long ago. It is as dangerous as the public drinking cup.

"I traced one death from a specific disease directly to the drinking cup and it might just as well have come from a cigar cutter."

Dr. William Polk, of 7 East Thirty-sixth street, said: "The cigar cutter is not particularly useful and when a pocket knife or one's teeth can be used to as good advantage it surely has nothing to offset the danger it brings to smokers. A man with a virulent disease wets his cigar unconsciously and then places it in the cutter. His sputum remains for the next smoker to collect."

"One of the worst modes of disease transmission is the cigar cutter on the tobacconist's stand," said Dr. J. H. Storer of 30 Edgecombe avenue. "Skin troubles, specific diseases and others as dangerous readily may be transmitted to the smoker. Until recently, I believe there were few persons in the city who had considered this danger. I have known of many cases of serious disease which might have come from these cutters, and I believe hundreds of persons contract sickness daily by their use."

"The risk is avoidable and should be done away with," said Dr. A. A. Smith, of 18 West Fifty-first street. The cigar cutter is merely an ideal arrangement for disease transmission. It is hard to think of a public disease carrier not under ban that is worse than the cigar cutter."

"Tuberculosis is one of the diseases, I have no doubt, which has been frequently transmitted by the cigar cutter," said Dr. William H. Park of 315 West Seventy-sixth street. "No more direct way of spreading contagion exists."

The new government building being erected at Delhi, the new capital of India, will cost $20,000,000.

An Everyday View of the Next Sunday School Lesson

(By J. L. Scott.)

Lesson Text, Mark 9:2-13. Golden Text, Luke 9:35-36: A voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my Son, my chosen; hear ye him. And when the voice came, Jesus was found alone.

There are certain days that stand out apart from ordinary days. Things appear to be reversed—the sun to rise in the west and the stars to drift the other way. The law of sequence seems to be suspended and a special providence to be in control. And such is the relation that the transfiguration bears to common life. The very approaches to it are marked by mystery.

The scene occurred on a "high mountain" whose name is unknown. Tradition has assigned it to Mount Tabor, though with little reason. For some purpose locality has not been regarded as important in the Master's life. The exact location of certain places often mentioned in Scripture is left to the reader's own surmising. And the reason is not far away—it is the event and not the locality in which we are interested. Could this mountain be identified, the event would be compelled to share its importance with the place. The mountain would obscure the scene.

In reading Scripture one should ever remember the relative importance of things, but this is something many frequently forget. For instance, here it is recorded that after six days Jesus took the three disciples and brought them up into a high mountain apart. Luke in writing of the same incident makes the time about eight days instead of six. As time is computed in the east, where a part of the day is regarded as the whole, either may have been correct. But whether six or eight, the one supreme fact is in no respect affected. And yet over mustard seeds of this kind good men go forth to war as if the mountain itself were in peril. Such men see nothing in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus but the dog at the gate.

The One Faithful in the Valley the First to Be Called Up Higher.

That Jesus should have selected Peter, James and John to accompany him in preference to the other disciples was but natural. They were best adapted to the experience that awaited. Nature may have more generously endowed them, or possibly they had better improved the opportunities of their discipleship. In either event Jesus simply recognized a law universally in force. "Whosoever hath, to him shall be given." The one faithful in the valley is the one first to hear the Master say, "Friend, come up higher." In the natural world position may come through influence; not so in the spiritual. There fitness is the only passport. Spiritual riches are eared but never bought. Year by year, day by day, hour by hour, blind men grope their way through the old world seeking nothing, reaching nothing, attaining nothing. No deep thought or study or experience has ever gone before to open their eyes and prepare the way. Such Andrews stay at the foot of the mountain, while Peter, James and John go up to meet Moses and Elijah upon the summit.

Luke in his narrative says that Jesus called the disciples apart for prayer. It had been his custom, as under the Spirit it so remains. One is most himself when alone. In the midnight silence Samuel best hears the voice of God. Our prayer meetings may be small but numbers do not always mean strength. Three on the mountain with Christ are more than nine in the valley without him. This prayer meeting was attended by one-fourth of the entire disciple membership. That is a large proportion. It is nearer one-tenth today.

Those Who Would Meet God Must Ascend to Do It.

"And he was transfigured before them" until his glory smote the disciples to the earth. The transfiguration of Jesus surpasses human analysis. There are no heights above it. Moses passed this way once at Sinai, and Stephen before the council caught a glimpse of its border hem, but some things transcend words. The very garments in their whiteness mock the fuller. The appearance of Moses and Elijah lends a touch of the finite to the scene. They were not apparitions, but men whose identity was known to the three. Once at least the gates of eternity swung on double hinges. And from the bourne of that undiscovered country two travelers returned to earth. Their theme as they talked with Jesus was the most vital to be found in either world—his decease but a brief time away. One of the disciples would have built three tents and lived there all his life, but transfiguration mountains are not intended as places of residence. They are too far distant from the crowds below. The mountain top is adapted to the prayer meeting, but life goes on in the valley. Down there the blind sit by the wayside and the hungry go out and cry for bread.

"And there came a cloud." There always does. Clouds are the children of the sunshine, and the two chase each other in endless circuit about the world. We may fear the cloud, but it has voices to those who listen. "This is my beloved Son." Christ is the center of the clouds and sunshine.

No Real Transfiguration Without the Presence of the Christ.

Once more those men were upon a sea, of another kind now. They were afraid and needed only the assurance of his presence. "And suddenly looking round about, they saw no one any more, save Jesus only with themselves." The world had returned to its normal condition. Men are sometimes lifted above themselves. Under the inspiration of a great sermon or the organ roll of music, or even in the chastening of a deep sorrow, we perhaps approach the transfiguration. But none of these conditions were present upon the mountain. It was a meeting of only four, but one of the four was the Christ.

"And as they were coming down from the mountain he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, save when the Son of man should have risen again from the dead." It is never well to open the way for possible antagonisms. There were nine disciples waiting below to resent that they had been left behind; and besides the world would not have credited the story. A greater truth must first lead the way. The resurrection became the test doctrine of the early church. Those who accepted it must concede the possibility of all else. Personal experiences should never be related save at the rarest times. They involve a sanctity of relation that should not be betrayed.

"How is it that the scribes say that Elijah must first come?" In this the scribes were right. But their position was only a half truth. Elijah had come, and they had failed to know him. Jesus saw in the fate of his friend that which would come to him. Already he was approaching the cross and its shadow had met him on the way.

TWO WOMEN RESENT ARREST.

Declare Their Detention at Frisco as Undesirables Is Outrage.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 22.—Two handsomely dressed women, registered at the Hotel St. Francis as Mrs. J. Ward Carter of London and Mrs. J. W. Chard of New York, were arrested today by federal inspectors and taken to the federal detention station on Angel island. Mrs. Carter arrived here yesterday from Hong Kong on board the liner Mongolia. Mrs. Chard said she had come to meet her daughter from New York. Both protested that the arrest, which was made under the law excluding undesirable aliens, was an outrage.

ARTIST FINDS A STRANGE PEOPLE

Is Trying to Reclaim Poor, Ignorant and Low Mountaineers.

ALL ARE DEGARDED

Nyack, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Probably nowhere else in America is there such a striking contrast—in the hills semi-savages and in the valleys the homes of some of the wealthiest persons in the world—as exists in the Ramapo mountains, Rockland county.

In the valleys at their base are handsome mansions; about one thousand feet above them, as the crow flies, but much farther by the blind trails through the forests—paths that zigzag a mile to gain an elevation of 500 feet—in little clearings on bits of level land, in the hovels of logs plastered with tenacious yellow mud to keep out the cold, live some of the poorest, most ignorant and at times the most lawless persons who can be found anywhere in the United States outside of the almost inaccessible fastnesses of the Tennessee mountains.

It is announced that a concerted effort is now to be made to improve the condition of these persons by Mrs. E. H. Harriman, her daughter, Mrs. Rumsey, and other wealthy women. The widow of the financier has given $1,000 to start the work. Miss Florence Smith, a teacher from the Eugenics Bureau Training school at Cold Springs Harbor, will begin soon to train the mountaineers in hygienics and to provide them with better surroundings.

The mountaineers, who live scattered through the forests for miles around, are descendants mostly of the slaves who were owned by the Suffern family and were liberated nearly one hundred years ago. Through an ancient admixture of their blood with that of the Indians who once roamed through this still wild region, and through a later mingling with the whites, the descendants are a curious looking race. Nearly all of them have yellow skin; tawny, wavy hair, the color of a lion's pelt, and blue or yellow eyes.

A person in whose veins there is still a predominance of yellow blood rarely has a mustache or a beard, but among these men of the mountains beards and mustaches are common. In the same family it is no unusual thing to see some of the children as golden haired and blue eyed as Swedes or Norwegians, others with sharp noses and copper colored skins and others with curly black locks and skins in which there is no suggestion of diluted blood.

The cabins of these mountaineers are built of unhewn logs. The crevices between them are plastered over with the sticky yellow mud that makes the thin coating of soil on the mountainside. There is no more than a single window, and that contains only a solitary pane of glass. Set among the bare trees and snow they have an air of poverty and desolation that cannot be equalled in a much longer journey from New York.

The surroundings are in keeping. Bowlders and half rotten logs lie about in confusion. Mongrel curs note the approach of the stranger with yelps and loud barks, and a man followed by a woman and several children rush out to investigate. The furtive glances and the manner of parrying questions show their suspicious natures at once.

One peep at the squalor inside of these cabins is enough. The occupants sleep on bags and hay. There are a rude table and a few articles of furniture made by the man, for none ever leaves the mountain, unless to visit the valley and rob a henroost. In most families the man is dark, with thick lips and long hair, giving credence to his claim of Indian descent. The women seem more of the negro type, but the children have a different colored skin.

More ignorance and degradation than prevail in these mountains would be difficult to find. Very few of the grown persons can read or write and religion does not interest them. The ceremony of marriage is not necessary. A man and woman agree to live together, and when this arrangement becomes tiresome either seeks another more congenial. Three or four surnames are held by three-quarters of the community.

Artist a Missionary.

On the crest of the Houvenkopf above them dwell two persons once fairly prominent in the affairs of life outside, but who now—forgetting the world and by the world forgot—are devoting the remaining years of their lives to educating and civilizing these half savage mountaineers. They are Francis Wheaton, an artist, and his wife, a graduate of Wellesley college, where she also was one of the instructors.

For many years Mr. Wheaton and his wife had been engaged in missionary work among the poorer classes. One day, while holding services at his old home in New Jersey, a young man called him aside and expressed the wish that his mother, who was living on Mount Houvenkopf, could attend such meetings. A date was fixed for the purpose and Mr. Wheaton and the young man started for the mountains. It was a hard journey over rough roads and difficult for the missionary, who has only one leg, but at last they reached the cabin on top and sent word around that religious services would be held that afternoon.

Twenty grown persons and several children attended, and Mr. Wheaton was surprised to find that none of them could read or write. There, he thought, was a field for missionary work, so he purchased a little home on the mountain top. After a year's work he decided to confine his work to the children and erected a simple building and established a school which is now under the direction of the state board of education.

Then his trials began. The mountainters disliked the idea of white persons living among them and would not allow their children to attend the school. His wife then joined him, and together they labored and persevered until at present they have twenty-six mountain children enrolled.

Few persons can realize the great sacrifices made by the artist and his wife in dwelling among such a race. Many of the Jackson Whites when once they understood entered into the spirit of the work, but others are harassing and dangerous at all times.

HOTEL BARS BABY BUT TAKES DOGS

Man Forced Out Because of Baby is Sued for Rent.

HE WILL FIGHT SUIT

New York, Nov. 21.—The unique case of Baby against Dog will be heard in the first district court of Jersey City when the action of the Fairmount Hotel company against Clinton B. Dow is heard. The hotel company wants $300 from Mr. Dow, who is a broker in New York, on the ground that he broke his lease and moved away from the Fairmount hotel, Jersey City, four months before his year's lease expired. Mr. Dow told his story yesterday in his answer to the action.

According to Mr. Dow, he occupied a three-room apartment in the Fairmount. Discovering that there was soon to be an addition to his family, he arranged with a friend who had a larger suite across the corridor, and who was about to move, to take the rooms. When the friend moved, he says, he went to the hotel management to arrange for the transfer, but was received with something of a stony stare and the information that there was no room in the Fairmount for infants.

Mr. Dow says that all his pleas were in vain, and feeling that more room was imperative, he moved out of the hotel into larger quarters in Duncan avenue, taking with him his big Newfoundland dog Mike. He sets forth that other tenants of the Fairmount also kept dogs in the building and the management made no objection, and he fails to see why a child should be less favored in this respect than a dog. Some of the tenants of the hotel have been subpoenaed as witnesses to show that they have kept dogs there, says Mr. Dow, and that there is no objection on the part of the hotel management. The Dows, with Mike and the young heir to the name, are now living in Duncan avenue. Mr. Dow declares that he will fight to a finish the action to collect the rent for the unexpired portion of his lease on the ground that a baby is entitled to the same consideration as a dog.

CIGAR CUTTERS CONTAIN GERMS

Physicians Place Ban on the Little Instrument for Smokers.

START A CRUSADE

New York, Nov. 21.—That disease and even death lurk in the apparently harmless cigar cutter and that each man who snips his "smoke" at a public stand invites grave danger is the opinion of a dozen physicians. They agreed that the contrivance is a menace to public health and should be abandoned.

Dr. John A. Wyeth, of 244 Lexington avenue, said: "The public cigar cutter should have been shut out of every civilized country long ago. It is as dangerous as the public drinking cup.

"I traced one death from a specific disease directly to the drinking cup and it might just as well have come from a cigar cutter."

Dr. William Polk, of 7 East Thirty-sixth street, said: "The cigar cutter is not particularly useful and when a pocket knife or one's teeth can be used to as good advantage it surely has nothing to offset the danger it brings to smokers. A man with a virulent disease wets his cigar unconsciously and

The one ul in the valley is the one first to the Master say, "Friend, come up ." In the natural world position come through influence; not so e spiritual. There fitness is the passport. Spiritual riches are but never bought. Year by year, y day, hour by hour, blind men their way through the old world g nothing, reaching nothing, at- g nothing. No deep thought or or experience has ever gone before n their eyes and prepare the way. Andrews stay at the foot of the ain, while Peter, James and John to meet Moses and Elijah upon mmit.

In the midnight silence l best hears the voice of God. ayer meetings may be small but rs do not always mean strength. on the mountain with Christ are than nine in the valley without This prayer meeting was attended e-fourth of the entire disciple membership. That is a large proportion. It is nearer one-tenth today.

Those Who Would Meet God Must Ascend to Do It.

"And he was transfigured before them" until his glory smote the disciples to the earth. The transfiguration of Jesus surpasses human analysis. There are no heights above it. Moses passed this way once at Sinai, and Stephen before the council caught a glimpse of its border hem, but some things transcend words. The very garments in their whiteness mock the fuller. The appearance of Moses and Elijah lends a touch of the finite to the scene. They were not apparitions, but men whose identity was known to the three. Once at least the gates of eternity swung on double hinges. And from the bourne of that undiscovered country two travelers returned to earth. Their theme as they talked with Jesus was the most vital to be found in either world—his decease but a brief time away. One of the disciples would have built three tents and lived there all his life, but transfiguration mountains are not intended as places of residence. They are too far distant from the crowds below. The mountain top is adapted to the prayer meeting, but life goes on in the valley. Down there the blind sit by the wayside and the hungry go out and cry for bread.

"And there came a cloud." There always does. Clouds are the children of the sunshine, and the two chase each other in endless circuit about the world. We may fear the cloud, but it has voices to those who listen. "This is my beloved Son." Christ is the center of the clouds and sunshine.

No Real Transfiguration Without the Presence of the Christ.

Once more those men were upon a sea, of another kind now. They were afraid and needed only the assurance of his presence. "And suddenly looking round about, they saw no one any more, save Jesus only with themselves." The world had returned to its normal condition. Men are sometimes lifted above themselves. Under the inspiration of a great sermon or the organ roll of music, or even in the chastening of a deep sorrow, we perhaps approach the transfiguration. But none of these conditions were present upon the mountain. It was a meeting of only four, but one of the four was the Christ.

"And as they were coming down from the mountain he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, save when the Son of man should have risen again from the dead." It is never well to open the way for possible antagonisms. There were nine disciples waiting below to resent that they had been left behind; and besides the world would not have credited the story. A greater truth must first lead the way. The resurrection became the test doctrine of the early church. Those who accepted it must concede the possibility of all else. Personal experiences should never be related save at the rarest times. They involve a sanctity of relation that should not be betrayed.

"How is it that the scribes say that Elijah must first come?" In this the scribes were right. But their position was only a half truth. Elijah had come, and they had failed to know him. Jesus saw in the fate of his friend that which would come to him. Already he was approaching the cross and its shadow had met him on the way.

CIGAR CUTTERS CONTAIN GERMS

Physicians Place Ban on the Little Instrument for Smokers.

START A CRUSADE

New York, Nov. 21.—That disease and even death lurk in the apparently harmless cigar cutter and that each man who snips his "smoke" at a public stand invites grave danger is the opinion of a dozen physicians. They agreed that the contrivance is a menace to public health and should be abandoned.

Dr. John A. Wyeth, of 244 Lexington avenue, said: "The public cigar cutter should have been shut out of every civilized country long ago. It is as dangerous as the public drinking cup.

"I traced one death from a specific disease directly to the drinking cup and it might just as well have come from a cigar cutter."

Dr. William Polk, of 7 East Thirty-sixth street, said: "The cigar cutter is not particularly useful and when a pocket knife or one's teeth can be used to as good advantage it surely has nothing to offset the danger it brings to smokers. A man with a virulent disease wets his cigar unconsciously and then places it in the cutter. His sputum remains for the next smoker to collect."

"One of the worst modes of disease transmission is the cigar cutter on the tobacconist's stand," said Dr. J. H. Storer of 30 Edgecombe avenue. "Skin troubles, specific diseases and others as dangerous readily may be transmitted to the smoker. Until recently, I believe there were few persons in the city who had considered this danger. I have known of many cases of serious disease which might have come from these cutters, and I believe hundreds of persons contract sickness daily by their use."

"The risk is avoidable and should be done away with," said Dr. A. A. Smith, of 18 West Fifty-first street. The cigar cutter is merely an ideal arrangement for disease transmission. It is hard to think of a public disease carrier not under ban that is worse than the cigar cutter."

"Tuberculosis is one of the diseases, I have no doubt, which has been frequently transmitted by the cigar cutter," said Dr. William H. Park of 315 West Seventy-sixth street. "No more direct way of spreading contagion exists."

The new government building being erected at Delhi, the new capital of India, will cost $20,000,000.

An Everyday View of the Next Sunday School Lesson

Lesson Text, Mark 9:2-13. Golden Text, Luke 9:35-36: A voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my Son, my chosen; hear ye him. And when the voice came, Jesus was found alone.

There are certain days that stand out apart from ordinary days. Things appear to be reversed—the sun to rise in the west and the stars to drift the other way. The law of sequence seems to be suspended and a special providence to be in control. And such is the relation that the transfiguration bears to common life. The very approaches to it are marked by mystery.

The scene occurred on a "high mountain" whose name is unknown. Tradition has assigned it to Mount Tabor, though with little reason. For some purpose locality has not been regarded as important in the Master's life. The exact location of certain places often mentioned in Scripture is left to the reader's own surmising. And the reason is not far away—it is the event and not the locality in which we are interested. Could this mountain be identified, the event would be compelled to share its importance with the place. The mountain would obscure the scene.

In reading Scripture one should ever remember the relative importance of things, but this is something many frequently forget. For instance, here it is recorded that after six days Jesus took the three disciples and brought them up into a high mountain apart. Luke in writing of the same incident makes the time about eight days instead of six. As time is computed in the east, where a part of the day is regarded as the whole, either may have been correct. But whether six or eight, the one supreme fact is in no respect affected. And yet over mustard seeds of this kind good men go forth to war as if the mountain itself were in peril. Such men see nothing in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus but the dog at the gate.

The One Faithful in the Valley the First to Be Called Up Higher.

That Jesus should have selected Peter, James and John to accompany him in preference to the other disciples was but natural. They were best adapted to the experience that awaited. Nature may have more generously endowed them, or possibly they had better improved the opportunities of their discipleship. In either event Jesus simply recognized a law universally in force. "Whosoever hath, to him shall be given." The one faithful in the valley is the one first to hear the Master say, "Friend, come up higher." In the natural world position may come through influence; not so in the spiritual. There fitness is the only passport. Spiritual riches are eared but never bought. Year by year, day by day, hour by hour, blind men grope their way through the old world seeking nothing, reaching nothing, attaining nothing. No deep thought or study or experience has ever gone before to open their eyes and prepare the way. Such Andrews stay at the foot of the mountain, while Peter, James and John go up to meet Moses and Elijah upon the summit.

Luke in his narrative says that Jesus called the disciples apart for prayer. It had been his custom, as under the Spirit it so remains. One is most himself when alone. In the midnight silence Samuel best hears the voice of God. Our prayer meetings may be small but numbers do not always mean strength. Three on the mountain with Christ are more than nine in the valley without him. This prayer meeting was attended by one-fourth of the entire disciple membership. That is a large proportion. It is nearer one-tenth today.

Those Who Would Meet God Must Ascend to Do It.

"And he was transfigured before them" until his glory smote the disciples to the earth. The transfiguration of Jesus surpasses human analysis. There are no heights above it. Moses passed this way once at Sinai, and Stephen before the council caught a glimpse of its border hem, but some things transcend words. The very garments in their whiteness mock the fuller. The appearance of Moses and Elijah lends a touch of the finite to the scene. They were not apparitions, but men whose identity was known to the three. Once at least the gates of eternity swung on double hinges. And from the bourne of that undiscovered country two travelers returned to earth. Their theme as they talked with Jesus was the most vital to be found in either world—his decease but a brief time away. One of the disciples would have built three tents and lived there all his life, but transfiguration mountains are not intended as places of residence. They are too far distant from the crowds below. The mountain top is adapted to the prayer meeting, but life goes on in the valley. Down there the blind sit by the wayside and the hungry go out and cry for bread.

"And there came a cloud." There always does. Clouds are the children of the sunshine, and the two chase each other in endless circuit about the world. We may fear the cloud, but it has voices to those who listen. "This is my beloved Son." Christ is the center of the clouds and sunshine.

No Real Transfiguration Without the Presence of the Christ.

Once more those men were upon a sea, of another kind now. They were afraid and needed only the assurance of his presence. "And suddenly looking round about, they saw no one any more, save Jesus only with themselves." The world had returned to its normal condition. Men are sometimes lifted above themselves. Under the inspiration of a great sermon or the organ roll of music, or even in the chastening of a deep sorrow, we perhaps approach the transfiguration. But none of these conditions were present upon the mountain. It was a meeting of only four, but one of the four was the Christ.

"And as they were coming down from the mountain he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, save when the Son of man should have risen again from the dead." It is never well to open the way for possible antagonisms. There were nine disciples waiting below to resent that they had been left behind; and besides the world would not have credited the story. A greater truth must first lead the way. The resurrection became the test doctrine of the early church. Those who accepted it must concede the possibility of all else. Personal experiences should never be related save at the rarest times. They involve a sanctity of relation that should not be betrayed.

"How is it that the scribes say that Elijah must first come?" In this the scribes were right. But their position was only a half truth. Elijah had come, and they had failed to know him. Jesus saw in the fate of his friend that which would come to him. Already he was approaching the cross and its shadow had met him on the way.

HIS NOSE IS MADE FROM HIS FINGER

Victim of Strange Accident Apparently as Good as New.

INTEREST IN CASE

New York, Nov. 22.—A man with a nose made out of the ring finger of his left hand was the center of interest at one session of the American Congress of Surgeons. The man's nose had been destroyed in an accident, none of the bone remaining. He could get no work because of his appearance and applied to Dr. Clarence MacWilliams, at the Presbyterian hospital.

"If you are willing to give up a finger, I'll try to make you a nose," said the surgeon, and the man agreed. His arm was bent so that the joint of the ring finger lay at the bridge of the nose and the finger extended downward. The skin was then opened and the whole finger, flesh, bone and all, sewed to the cheek at either side.

The arm was placed in a plaster cast and kept immovable for twenty-one days. The nail had first been removed from the finger. After the second day, the patient said, the arm went to sleep and he lost all sense of pain. On the twenty-first day, after the finger had grown firmly into the face, the finger was amputated at the joint where it joined the hand.

The first and second joints formed the new nose. The third joint was bent toward the face and the amputated end was sewed to the face so that a good-looking nose was formed. The only features lacking were the nostrils. The patient will be discharged today.

"When he grows a mustache no one will ever know the difference between that finger nose and a real one," said Dr. MacWilliams.

LAWMAKERS DIG HARD FOR SALARY

Duties of Congressmen Have Been Continuous Recently.

SHIVELY A WORKER

Washington, Nov. 22.—The extra session of congress which has been decided upon and which will begin not later than April 15 next, promises to be one of the longest extraordinary sessions in the country's history. Hardly any democratic leader can be found who sets an earlier date than October for the termination of the session and there are many who believe that it will merge into the regular session in December, 1913.

This prospect for a prolonged special session is directing attention to the fact that in recent years the congress of the United States has been giving almost a continuous performance. Those senators who, like Shively of Indiana, made their advent in the upper chamber on March 4, 1909, are beginning to wonder whether or not service in the senate is to be all work, with no opportunity for recuperation. Some of them are saying facetiously that the old adage, "There is no rest for the wicked," seems to apply with a strange and fatalistic force to the senate of the United States.

Hard Work for Shively.

Take the case of Senator Shively as an example of how the solons of the upper branch have been worked in recent years. No sooner had he taken office that he was pressed into the special session of 1909 that revised the tariff. It dragged along until August 5. The next year—1911—the regular long session of congress lasted until June 26.

The year following was looked forward to as a time when senators might spend the usual vacation between the short and long-term sessions free from the exacting cares of active service in Washington, but President Taft knocked this pleasant anticipation into a cocked hat by calling an extra session to enact Canadian reciprocity. That session did not adjourn until August 22, and it was a worn and frayed bunch of statesmen that left Washington for their homes late in August and early in September.

Then came the long session of 1912, which kept the solons here until August 26. Now comes the announcement of a special session next spring, summer and fall to revise the tariff again. Following it, in 1914, will be the regular long session, which, if precedent is followed, probably will extend into August, so that senators of Shively's class, who came into office in 1909, will be held here every summer during the six years of their senatorial term. Not since the government was founded have senators been held to the grindstone so continuously and persistently.

An Overworked Body.

Many well-informed persons believe that the heavy exactions imposed upon senators in the way of extra duty in recent years are responsible largely for the amazing increase in the senate's death rate. The mortality among senators has been so great during the last few years that had it occurred in similar proportions among the people at large it would amount to almost the ravages of a plague. There was a time when senators lived long and the senate was considered proverbially to be an "old men's body." References were frequently made to the "elder statesmen" and gray hairs and flowing white beards were associated with the upper chamber in the popular imagination.

In modern times this characteristic has disappeared almost entirely. Service in the senate is not conducive to longevity. Many of the senators who have died in recent years were comparatively young men, who under ordinary life expectancy, should have many years of usefulness ahead of them. Senator Nixon of Nevada was 52.

Senator Dolliver, who was literally worked to death in the tariff session of 1909, when he labored so valiantly for the ultimate consumer, was just rounding into the full measure of his gigantic powers. Vice President Sherman died at the premature age of 57, although a man of his sturdy strength might be expected to live to a ripe old age.

The list of senators who have fallen victims to the senate's relentless grind before their appointed time is a long one and includes Senator Hughes of Colorado, Senator Latimer of South Carolina, Senator Heyburn of Idaho, Senator Clay of Georgia, Senator Alger of Michigan, Senator McLaurin of Mississippi, Senator Carter of Montana, Senator Johnson of North Dakota, Senator Taylor of Tennessee, Senator Proctor of Vermon, Senator Daniel of Virginia and others.

Work Days of Congress.

Here is the time consumed by congress in the transaction of public business during the last five years:

Sixtieth congress, first session, 181 days.

Sixtieth congress, second session, 87 days.

Sixty-first congress, first session, 144 days.

Sixty-first congress, second session, 202 days.

Sixty-first congress, third session, 89 days.

Sixty second congress, first session, 141 days.

Sixty-second congress, second session, 207 days.

The special session which President-elect Wilson has signified his intention of calling will be the eighteenth extraordinary session in the history of the country. The most protracted session ever held was the 345 days of the second fortieth, but a very long recess rendered it less of a grind than some of the other special sessions.

The time required to pass former great tariff bills was as follows:

The McKinley bill was reported from the ways and means committee April 16, 1890, the conference report was agreed to September 30, and the bill was approved by the president on October 1.

The Wilson bill was reported to the house December 20, 1893, and became a law on August 27, 1894, without the approval of President Cleveland, who refused to sign it.

The Dingly bill was reported to the house March 19, 1897, and received the president's approval on July 24 of that year.

The Payne-Aldrich bill was reported by Chairman Payne on March 18, 1909, and received the approval of President Taft on August 5.

If the coming special session does not begin until April 15, the date tentatively set, it can hardly conclude its labors before October.

OIL ACTIVITY IS RENEWED.

Operators in Eastern Indiana Field Begin Prospecting.

Portland, Ind., Nov. 22.—Oil operators in the eastern Indiana field are preparing to re-enter old leases in the spring, and prospects for new leases where there is a vestige of opportunity for a flow, even though the production is small. A price of $1.00 per barrel, the highest to which Indiana oil has ever gone, is attractive to owners of leases and will send them scouting over territory abandoned when the price decreased. A new twenty-five barrel well was struck on the Losch leases in Randolph county this week and another has been started in the same vicinity. While only small flows are expected, local operators say the activity in the spring will probably parallel that in the eastern Indiana fields five years ago, when the flow began to fail.

WOMEN OF WORLD IN TITANIC FUND

Leader Tells Committee of Support from All Classes.

TALKS OF THE PLAN

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 22.—Mrs. John Hays Hammond, secretary of the Women's Titanic Memorial, told members of the Chicago committee at a luncheon in the Congress hotel of the open-hearted contributions from persons in all walks of life and in all parts of the world.

"During the latter part of last April a little body of five people organized in my drawing room the Woman's Titanic Memorial," said Mrs. Hammond. "Today, seven months later, our membership reaches from sea to sea, across our broad home country. Our central office in Washington is now in correspondence with every nation of the civilized world.

"We have received contributions from missionaries in China, wives of American diplomatists in Russia, England, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, Denmark and Italy. From American students in Berlin, Paris and Rome generous offerings have come. The women of Bolivia, through our state department, have begged leave to share in our enterprise by sending a brick of native silver. From the colored women in the south we have received hard-earned dollars; from the wives of coal miners money has come.

"Ranchers' wives have joined us, one woman in the far west writing that she was so far out in the wilderness she never saw a woman from one week's end to another; so she could not hand out coupons; but she made a hard effort and corralled three dollars, and it was no cinch!

"A touching contribution came from the little girls in an orphans' home; the sum was ten cents. Fashionable girls' schools have collected and sent us goodly sums, domestic servants, shop girls, professional nurses, teachers, actresses—wage earners of every kind—have helped us.

"The army women have rendered most valiant assistance. They have collected money for us in the Philippines, Puerto Rico, and, indeed, in every colonial and domestic post. Panama and Hawaii have also fallen into line.

"Our contributions have ranged from three cents to a thousand dollars. Poets have given us their poems, painters their pictures, musicians their compositions; and through these artistic channels we have often reached hearts which we could otherwise never have touched.

"The inception of the Woman's Titanic Memorial blossomed simultaneously in hundreds of women's hearts. Every woman who loved a good man was filled with reverent admiration for those brave men who unselfishly died to save women and little children."

SMALL CHILDREN ESCAPE BEATING

Harsh Methods for Training Japanese to Be Athletes.

AN INVESTIGATION

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Methods by which little Japanese children, bought from their parents, are trained for five years or more to become "family acrobats" are being investigated by United States immigration authorities, the Hyde Park and Woodlawn police, and Patrick McGuire, juvenile officer in Woodlawn. McGuire expects to swear out a warrant for Kumatro Namba, 1227 East Seventy-first street, their father.

Two of Namba's proteges ran away from his "school," sobbing that they had been beaten as long as they could stand it. Ottome Tamaka, a 14-year-old girl, showed a new gash across her forehead as evidence of the severity of her training. Yoshi Wakahama, her boy companion, a year older, had fled with her.

Do Stunts for Pennies.

A south park policeman saw a crowd gathered near the edge of Jackson park late in the afternoon and, running up, he found little Yoshi bounding about on the grass to the admiration of a growing circle of spectators. Little Otome tried it for a while, but put her hand to her aching head and confined her labors to collecting dimes and nickels and pennies. A word or two with the child told tht policeman what had happened and he turned both youngsters over to the Hyde Park police.

On the way to Hyde Park station the children talked volubly. A glance at the girl told why she kept her hand at her head. There was a long gash in her forehead. The boy had no such scar, but complained of bruises.

"Souvenirs" of the School.

These, they told the policeman, were their souvenirs of "school." They said they had been collecting these for nearly five years. Their "school" was one run by Kumatro Namba, 1227 East Seventy-first street, who trains Japanese children for "family troupes" of acrobats. The children he rents from their parents in Japan for seven years, paying $25 for the full term. What he makes by training them and putting them on the road no one knows. What constitutes their training the children certainly know, and the police, Philip McGuire, juvenile officer, and the United States immigration officers intend to find out.

One of the Modern Wonders of Electricity

THOMAS A. EDISON years ago dreamed of an electrical age. Today he lives to see it a reality. His prediction has been fulfilled. Today in every line of endeavor, muscular, brute and steam motive force has given way to electricity, the most manageable and most instantly responsive force we have at our command. In using electricity as the motive force of the

The Boon of Health Makes Manly Men.

(From Statistic Student.)

Private statistics of a physician with a national practice, indicate that fully 50 per cent. of middle aged men are partly or wholly deficient in ability, manliness and health. If men could only know the meaning of the usual symptoms which pressage the oncoming of premature age many could be saved from misery, despondency and an early grave. Symptoms should not be confounded with disease, but should be accepted as warnings of the approach of disease.

That many may know what to do when such symptoms exist the following symptoms and prescription is published.

A premature breakdown of the vitality is indicated by dull, sunken eyes, cold extremities, backache, headache, fatigue, pains in small of back, pains in back of head, spots before the eyes, weakness in spine, twichting and trembling, impaired memory, loss of appetite, wasting, thinness (or abnormal fat), shrunken, flabby flesh, wrinkles, dullness, languor, constipation, kidney disorders, irritability, lack of ambition, timidity, weak spirited, dragging walk and unmanly carriage.

If the reader decides to try it, get three ounces of ordinary syrup of sarsaparilla compound, and one ounce compound fluid balmwort; mix and let stand two hours; then get one ounce compound essence cardiol and one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardomom), mix all together, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at night.

This contains no opiates whatever and may also be used by women who suffer with their nerves with absolute certainty of prompt and lasting benefits.

By preparing the treatment at home secretly no one need know of another's trouble, while the ingredients are much used in filling various prescriptions, so that even the purchaser of them separately need occasion no timidity.

RAILROAD ATTACKS RATE LAW.

Southern Pacific Fights Three-Cent Passenger Fares in Arizona.

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 22.—The legality of Arizona's 3-cent-fare law, adopted by the voters on Nov. 5, was attacked today in the United States district court by the Southern Pacific railroad. Should the company be sustained, referendum measures providing for equal suffrage, recall of judges and state industrial ventures also will be threatened. The railway attorneys contended that the law requiring that the full text of referendum measures to be presented must be sent out to voters ninety days before election was not complied with, only fifty-three days having elapsed from the first mailing until the vote was polled.

MARX SOCIALISM MENACES NATION

Dr. Coit, Settlement Worker, Deplores Its Growth in America.

TO AVERT CLASS WAR

New York, Nov. 22.—Dr. Stanton Coit, sociologist and founder of the University Settlement, declares against socialism in an address just published. "If Marxian socialism gains further ground," he says, "it will become a menace to the existence of the nation—certainly of the state as a democratic republic."

The declaration comes in a foreword to the published proceedings of the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the University Settlement. Dr. Coit, who is now head of the Ethical Culture society in London, was unable to attend the celebration, and the foreword is his contribution to the occasion.

"I gladly make use of this opportunity," says Dr. Coit, "for presenting three ideas which may help to interpret to the settlement workers themselves and to the public the meaning of what in America is called settlement work or social reform, as distinct from Marxian socialism."

Settlement workers have often been confused with socialists, and Dr. Coit shows the difference between the points of view of the two kinds of workers for social reform.

"Marxian socialism has of late years grown rapidly in America," he says, "not only among the leaders of trade unions, but even among the undergraduates in men's and women's colleges. This growth, in my judgment, should be regarded as a danger signal.

"There are three main grounds for alarm at the development of Marxian socialism in this country. The first error which is gaining ground among the professed friends of the wage-earners is what is called the materialistic conception of history. According to this doctrine ideas, ideals, principles of right and wrong in no wise help to bring about a juster social order. The only dynamic of upward evolution, it affirms, is the economic condition itself of the working classes. The worse that condition is the mightier is its power to overthrow the present inadequate production and unjust distribution of wealth and to establish a co-operative commonwealth.

"We social workers, on the other hand, hold an opposite doctrine. We believe in ideational forces. We affirm that the moral judgment of human beings, as it becomes enlightened and organized, is the force which brings about economic justice. We hold that even class interest itself has no enduring power except when new schemes of ownership and control are backed by disinterested moral approval.

"In the second place, it is the policy of the Marxian socialists, against their own materialistic theory, to engender and stimulate class hatred to the uttermost. Resentment on the part of wage-earners against private capitalists and employers is the spiritual dynamic by which the Marxians mean to effect the transference of the land and capital of the nation from private to collective ownership. Such a dynamic must engender civil war. If Marxian socialism gains further ground it will become a menace to the existence of the nation—certainly to the state as a democratic republic.

"Social workers and social reformers, on the other hand, as I understand them, are not opposed to the collective ownership of the land and capital, but the spiritual dynamic to which they appeal is what may be called the higher patriotism—the interest of each human being in the good of the whole community. They seek to enlighten and stimulate this interest. They believe that class hatred will, in the end, prove a more deadly enemy to the wage-earners than even the economic greed of the private capitalists. They do not believe in the "economic man" of Karl Marx and of the older English economists from whom he borrowed his fictitious entity. The Marxians err in thinking that settlement workers have no social philosophy deeper than the application of "rose water to the plague," which Miss Jane Addams tells us they were accused by young socialists of believing in.

"The social workers have a counter idea as to the dynimics of economic revolution, and more clearly in the future than in the past they will fight the doctrine of class war with the doctrine of the social-democratic idealism of America. They resent, as full of falsehood and treason to the nation, the idea that working people and private capitalists have no interest in common. Irrespective of economic antagonisms, these classes have in common the love of their country and pride in it and the desire for universal social service.

"In the third place, the Marxians are pre-Darwinian, in so far as they protest against a gradual and opportunistic transference of land and capital from private to public ownership. Social workers believe that a sudden and universal seizure politically by the proletariat of the national resources of wealth, irrespective of the political drill and education of the wage-earning classes by experience, would be little less than insane. They believe in no domination of the working classes politically and economically which has not been prepared for by just such tentative experiments and partial failures in communal control of ownership as are today disciplining the social democracy of America.

"Here, then, are three ideas characteristic of settlement workers. In the past they have said little about them, but have acted in accordance with them. In the future they will not only continue to act in accordance with them, but they will have very much to say about them in order to rescue America from a war, already threatening, between the masses and the classes."

EAST SIDE WANTS SUBWAY.

Civic Improvement Association Directors Meet.

At a meeting of the executive board of the East Side and Maumee River Civic Improvement association held Thursday night at the German American Trust company, the members expressed their desire for subways at Walton avenue and Wayne Trace. They also discussed plans for securing a park on the east side, and agreed that new pavement should be laid on Maumee avenue.

The committee named December 2 as the date for the general meeting of the association, to be held at Harmer school. Officers for the coming year will be elected at this time. The board of park commissioners is to be officially notified of the need of a park on the east side of the city and a request for consideration is to be sent to the common council.

CRIPPLED BOY HAD LOST HOPE

Moroseness Led to Shooting of Hammond Woman by Stepson.

FAMILY IS PROMINENT

Hammond, Ind., Nov. 22.—"Tell Frank I forgive him and that I wish I might live to help him," were the words of Mrs. Lincoln V. Cravens, wife of a prominent Hammond attorney, yesterday before she was put under the influence of anesthetics at St. Margaret's hospital for operation as a result of four bullet wounds inflicted by her 19-year-old stepson, Frank Cravens.

In an adjoining room, with the pallor of death on his face, but uncommunicative, lay her youthful assailant with a bullet under his heart, fired by the same gun he had turned on her, awaiting the attention of the surgeons. His victim passed away five hours after the tragedy. His condition is critical.

When the father married Grace Green, 30 years old, last winter, he hoped that she might bring sunshine into the heart of his crippled son, who must answer the charge of murder if he lives.

Boy Grows Morose.

The boy, feeling that he had to go through life with the handicap of one leg, and imagining that she replaced him in his father's affections, grew morose, and seemingly was the victim of mental depression. Where the two appeared together in public there was no suspicion of an estrangement, but the tragedy today brought out some of the incidents which led to the climax.

Mrs. Cravens, anticipating trouble, had hidden a revolver which she had discovered in the young man's pocket. He found it yesterday and, carrying it in his hands, walked into the dining room, where Mrs. Cravens was sitting alone. He stood in the doorway, a distance of ten feet from her, looking into her eyes, but without saying a word.

"Well, Frank," said the woman with a forced and nervous laugh, as she watched the hand in which he held the gun, and for an answer he brought the gun down to his hip and fired.
